A Valuable Invention. Mr. A. H. Rowand, of Allegheny City, the inventor, has exhibited to us a model of his newly invented "Railroad Car Buffer" with coupling and draw-bar attached, designed jars to railroad cars, and to diminish the shock ceived the approval of many railroad officers. oce of its applicability to the end designed is that it has, although only patented on the lat of January last, been adopted by five railroad companies. The invention consists in providing within a case or box a series of metallic springs, so aropposite aides of a wedge shaped bar, and so rranged as to all w this bar to press it wedge-shaped and between the opposing and lateral pressure presented by the springs, the resistance of the main springs being increase d by elliptic or other springs placed on the outer sides of the metallic springs, and be-tween them and the sides of the box or case in which the whole is secured. The wedge ended bar operates on the main springs in its backward as well as its forward motion. this buffer has been fully proven by experi ment and actual trial on railroad cars. fully tested, not long since, in one of the hy draulic presses at the soap and candle factory of Messrs. B. C., J. H. and N. P. Sawyer when a force 200,000 pounds was brought to bear against the draw-bar, which has a motion of ten inches of spring action, yet this im-mense pressure forced its entrance into the spring only 81 inches, not reaching its princil resistance, thus proving an almost impossi bility to overcome the elasticity of this buffer. The experiment was conducted by W. P. Eichbaum, Esq., and was most satisfactory to al who witnessed it.

One of the chief advantages claimed by the inventor is dispensing with india rubber, which, in cold weather, becomes rigid, and makes its resistance of little practical value. It is estimated that the resistance offered by one o these buffers is five hundeed tons. Thus, a train of six passenger cars, average weight 123 tons, runing at 30 miles an hour (44 feet per second) will have a force of 5,412 tons, while the resisting power with these buffers attached at each end of each car would be 6,000 tons, suficent to overcome the force of the train and leaving an overplus resistance of nearly such a powerful instrument as this, and it has received the endorsment of the most skilful en gineers and railroad men, who acknowledge ts merit, while the Scientific American, speak ing of the invention says: "The inventor claims to have the best Buffer ever invented, and we are not prepared to deny it."

The cost of this buffer will not exceed that of those now in use, while its advantages are obvious to all who have examined it. As the terms upon which railroads can have the right to use it are moderate, and it can be made in any ailroad work shop, we expect to see it soon in general use, and so far as our observation goes we think it will be instrumental in saving both
