The New York Tribune is the strongest aider and comforter of the enemy to be found North of Mason's and Lixon's line. Its editor, Horace Greeley, has always been a factionist, and by a sem blance of moral and political honesty, acquired a large circulation for his paper, which was esteemed as the orthordox large but peculiar class of people. They believed in the Iribune, swore by the Tribune and endeavored to square their political action according to the behests of their Great High Priest, the immaculate Greeley. For a long time the influence of Greeley in the Republican party was

Wm. H. Seward, chose to act without the advice and consent of Horace Greeley, and forthwith the factionist turned against him. He came all the way from Oregon as a delegate to defeat Mr.Seward in the Chicago Convention; he poured out the coarse and bitter vials of his wrath against him in the columns of his Tribune; and when the new administration came into power he impudently attempted to dictate what its course should be, from the sanhedrim of his master Greeley had desired it should be. at once assumed the active exercise of influence of newspapers as the dictating
