The Pittsburgh Post.

VOLUME XIX. PITTSBURGH, MONDAY MORNING, JULY 8, 1861. NUMBER 253

The Pittsburgh Post.

Published Every Morning, (Sundays Excepted,)

At the North-East corner of Fifth and Wood sts.

Terms: Six Dollars a year, payable strictly in advance.

☞Single copies, Two Cents. For sale at the counter in the Office, and by the Newsboys.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

Headings.	Daily.	Three times a week.	Twice a week.	Once a week.	25 Words or less.
One insertion,	50	.....	.....	.....	50
Two insertions,	75	.....	.....	.....	75
Three insertions,	1 00	.....	.....	.....	1 00
One week,	1 75	.....	.....	.....	50
Two weeks,	3 00	2 00	1 50	1 00	75
Three weeks,	4 00	2 65	2 00	1 25	1 00
One month,	6 00	3 85	50	1 50	1 75
Two months,	7 00	4 65	50	2 85	2 50
Three months,	9 00	5 00	4 50	3 00	3 00
Four months,	10 00	6 65	5 00	3 85	4 50
Five months,	11 00	7 35	5 50	3 65	5 50
Six months,	12 00	8 00	6 00	4 00	6 00
Nine months,	16 00	10 85	8 00	5 25	9 00
One year,	20 00	13 35	10 00	6 65	12 00
Standing Card, six lines or less, per annum,					10 00

CHANGEABLE AS PLEASURE:

One square, per annum, (exclusive of paper), 25 00
Marriage notices, 50 cents; Death notices 25 cents

☞ FOR 1861. ☜

ONE DOLLAR.

THE PITTSBURGH

WEEKLY POST,

ESTABLISHED OVER FIFTY YEARS,

WILL HEREAFTER BE FURNISHED

—TO—

Advance Paying Subscribers

—AT—

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR,

IT IS PRINTED ON A

MAMMOTH SHEET,

WITH

LARGE CLEAR TYPE,

IT CONTAINS ALL THE

EXCITING NEWS OF THE DAY!

Editorial, Local and Miscellaneous; Foreign and Domestic Markets.

SEND YOUR DOLLAR BY MAIL AT OUR RISK

GET UP CLUBS in your neighborhood. Send for a PROSPECTUS and a SPECIMEN COPY.

Don't forget the Dollar.

Address JAMES P. BARR,

Editor and Proprietor, Pittsburgh, Pa.

MORNING POST JOB OFFICE.

JAMES P. BARR. EDWIN A. MYERS.

BARR & MYERS,

BOOK AND JOB PRINTERS,

Corner Fifth & Wood Sts., Pitts'h.

EVERY DESCRIPTION OF

PLAIN AND FANCY PRINTING

Executed in the finest style.

RAIL ROAD,

COMMERCIAL, MERCANTILE AND LEGAL WORK

at short notice, on reasonable terms,

Particular attention paid to the Printing of

POSTERS, PROGRAMMES, &c.,

For Concerts, Exhibitions and Circuses.

LARGE ADDITIONS OF TYPE & MACHINERY

HAVING RECENTLY BEEN MADE TO THIS ESTABLISHMENT,

The facilities for turning out Work with promptness and despatch cannot be excelled by any other office in the city.

NATRONA OIL.

MANUFACTURED BY PENNSYLVANIA Petroleum Manufacturing Company CLEAR AND ODORLESS, and guaranteed unchangeable in color.

"THE ILLUMINATOR OF THE DAY"

Constantly on hand and for sale by P. S. M Co. at their new office, No. 24 Wood street, between First and Second streets.

GEO. CALHOUN, General Agent

To Farmers.

A FEW BUSHELS OF SILVER GRAY BUCKWHEAT FOR SEED.—This Buckwheat ripens about two weeks earlier than the common, consequently escapes the hot August suns; so injurious to Buckwheat in this latitude. It yields much more and is much more flour to the bushel, and is as much whiter than the flour from the common Buckwheat.

For sale in small lots by Liberty street.

jy3 W. W. WALLACE.

For Rent.

A STORE HOUSE on Federal and Water streets, Allegheny, suitable for a Dry Goods Trimming or Shoe Store.

R. H. DAVIS.

DRIED APPLES.—200 bushel Bright Dry Apples in store and for sale by

JAS. A. FETZER,

jy6 corner Market and First streets

THE DAILY POST.

MONDAY MORNING.....JULY 8.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

DELIVERED JULY 5th, '61,

AT AN EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS.

Fellow Citizens of the Senate and House of Representatives:

Having been convened on an extraordinary occasion, as authorized by the Constitution, your attention is not called to any ordinary subject of legislation. At the beginning of the present Presidential term, four months ago, the functions of the Federal Government were found to be generally suspended within the several States of South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Florida, excepting only those of the Post Office Department. Within these States, the forts, arsenals dockyards, custom house and the like, including the movable and stationary property in and about them, had been seized and were held in open hostility to this Government, excepting only forts Pickens, Taylor and Jefferson on and near the Florida coast, and Fort Sumter in Charleston harbor, South Carolina. The forts thus seized had been put in an improved condition, new ones had been built, and armed forces had been organized and were organizing all avowedly with some hostile purpose. The forts remaining in the possession of the Federal Government in and near those States were either besieged or menaced by warlike preparations, and especially Fort Sumter was nearly surrounded by well protected hostile batteries, with guns equal in quality to the best of its own, and outnumbering the latter as perhaps ten to one. A disproportionate share of the Federal muskets and rifles had somehow found their way into those States, and had been seized to be used against the government. Accumulations of the public revenue lying within them had been seized for the same object. The navy was scattered in distant seas, leaving but a very small part of it within the immediate reach of the government. Officers of the Federal army and navy had resigned in great numbers, and of those resigning a large proportion had taken up arms against the government. Simultaneously and in connection with all this, the purpose to sever the Federal Union was openly avowed. In accordance with this purpose an ordinance had been adopted in each of these States declaring the States respectively to be separated from the National Union. A formula for instituting a combined government of these States had been promulgated, and this illegal organization in the character of the Confederate States, was already invoking recognition, aid and intervention from foreign powers. Finding this condition of things, and believing it to be an imperative duty on the incoming Executive to prevent, if possible, the consummation of such attempts to destroy the Federal Union, a choice of means to that end became indispensable. This choice was made and was declared in the inaugural address. The policy chosen looked to the exhaustion of all peaceful measures before a resort to any stronger ones. It sought only to hold the public places and property not already wrested from the government and to collect the revenue, relying for the rest on time, discussion and the ballot-box. It promised a continuance of the mails at government expense to the very people who were resisting the government, and it gave repeated pledges against any disturbance to any of the people, or any of their rights, of all that which a President might constitutionally and justifiably do in such a case. Everything was foreborne, without which it was believed possible to keep the government on foot.

On the fifth of March, the present incumbent's first full day in office, a letter of Major Anderson, commanding at Fort Sumter, written on the 28th of February, and received at the War Department, on the fourth of March was, by that department placed in his hands. This letter expressed the professional opinion of the writer that reinforcements could not be thrown into that fort within the time for his relief rendered necessary by the limited supply of provisions and with a view of holding possession of the same with a force of less than 20,000 good and well disciplined men. This opinion was concurred in by all the officers of his command, and their memoranda on the subject were made enclosures of the subordinate's letter. The whole was laid before Lieutenant General Scott, who also at once concurred with Major Anderson in opinion. On reflection, however, he took full time, consulting with other officers, the end of which army and the navy, and, at four days, came reluctantly but decidedly to the same conclusion as before. He also stated, at the same time, there were not sufficient forces then at the control of the government, or could be raised and brought to the ground within the time when the provisions in the Fort would be exhausted. In a purely military point of view, this reduced the duty of the administration in the case to the mere matter of getting the garrison safely out of the fort. It was believed, however, that to so abandon that position, under the circumstances, would be utterly ruinous—that the necessity under which it was to be done would not be fully understood—that by many it would be construed as a part of voluntary policy; that at home it would discourage the friends of the Union, embolden its adversaries, and go far to ensure to the latter a recognition abroad; that, in fact, it would be our national destruction. Consummated, this could not be allowed. Starvation was not yet upon the garrison, and ere it would be reached, Fort Pickens might be reinforced. This last would be a clear indication of policy, and would better enable the country to accept the evacuation of Fort Sumter as a military necessity. An order was at once directed to be sent for the landing of the troops from the steamship Brooklyn into Fort Pickens. This order could not go by land, but must take the longer and slower route by sea. The first return news from the order was received but one week before the fall of Fort Sumter. The news itself was, that the officers commanding the Sabine, to which vessel the troops had been transferred from the Brooklyn, acting upon some quasi armistice of the late administration, and of the existence of which the present administration up to the time the order was dispatched, had only two vague and uncertain rumors to fix attention—had refused to land the troops to now reinforce Fort Pickens before a crisis would be reached at Fort Sumter—was impossible, rendered so by the near exhaustion of provision in the latter named fort in precaution against such a conjuncture, the government had, a few days before, commenced preparing an expedition, as well adapted as might be, to relieve Fort Sumter, which expedition was intended to be alternately used or not. According to circumstances the strongest anticipated case for using it was presented, and it was resolved to send it forward. As had been intended in this contingency it was also resolved to notify the Governor of South Carolina that he might expect an attempt would be made to provision the fort, and that if the attempt should not be resisted there would be no effort to throw in men, arms or ammunition without further notice, or in case of an attack upon the fort.

This notice was accordingly given, whereupon the fort was attacked and bombarded to its fall, without even awaiting the arrival of the provision expedition. It is thus seen that the attack upon and the reduction of Fort Sumter was in no sense a matter of self defence on the part of the assailants. They well knew that the garrison in the fort could by no possibility commit aggressions upon them. They knew they were expressly notified that the giving of bread to the few brave and hungry men of the garrison was all which would on that occasion be attempted, unless themselves, by resisting so much, should provoke more. They knew that this government desired to keep the garrison in the first; not to assail them, but to merely maintain visible possession, and thus to preserve the Union from actual and immediate dissolution, trusting, as hereinbefore stated, to time, discussion, and the ballot box, for final adjustment, and they assailed and reduced the fort for precisely the reverse object: to drive out the authority of the Federal Union, and thus force it to immediate dissolution. That this was their object the Executive well understood, and having said to them, in the inaugural address, "you can have no conflict without being yourselves the agressors," he took pains, not only to keep this declaration good, but also to keep the case so free from the power of ingenious sophistry as that the world should not be able to misunderstand it by the affair at Fort Sumter, with its surrounding circumstances.—That point was reached then, and there—by the assailants of the Government began the conflict of arms, without a gun in sight or in expectancy to return their fire, save only the few in the fort sent to that harbor years before for their own protection, and still ready to give that protection in whatever was lawful. In this act, discarding all else, they have forced upon the country the distinct issue—immediate dissolution or blood—and this issue embraces more than the fate of these United States. It presents to the whole family of man, the question whether a constitutional Republic, or democracy—a government of the people by the same people—can or can not maintain its territorial integrity against its own domestic foes. It presents the question whether discontented individuals, too few in numbers to control the Administration according to organic law in any case, can always, upon the pretences made in this case, or on any other pretences, or arbitrarily without any pretence, break up their government, and thus practically put an end to free government on earth. It forces us to ask: Is there in all Republics this inherent and fatal weakness?—Must a government of necessity, be too strong for the liberties of its own people, or too weak to maintain its own existence? So viewing the issue, no choice was left but to call out the war power of the Government and so to resist force employed for its destruction by force for its preservation. The call was made, and the response of the country was most gratifying, surpassing in unanimity and spirit the most sanguine expectation. Yet none of the States commonly called Slave States, except Delaware, gave a regiment through regular State organization. A few regiments have been organized within some others of these States by individual enterprise and received into the Government service.—Of course, the seceded States, so called, to which Texas has been joined about the time of the inauguration, gave no troops in the cause of the Union. The Border States, were not unform in their action, some of them being almost for the Union, while in others, as Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee and Arkansas, the Union sentiment was nearly repressed and silenced. The course taken in Virginia was the most remarkable, perhaps the most important. A convention, elected by the people of that State to consider this very question of disrupting the Federal Union, was in session at the capital of Virginia when Fort Sumter fell. To this body the people had chosen a large majority of professed Union men. Almost imediately after the fall of Fort Sumter many members of the majority went over to the original disunion minority, and with them adopted an ordinance for withdrawing the State from the Union. Whether this change was wrought by their great approval of the assault upon Sumter, or the great resentment at the Government's resistance to that assault is not yet definitely known. Although they submitted the ordinance for ratification to a vote of the people, to be taken on a day then somewhat more than a month distant, the Convention and the Legislature, which was also in session at the same time and place with leading men of the State, not members of either, immediately commenced acting as if the State were already out of the Union.—They pushed military preparations vigorously forward all over the State; they seized the U. S. Armory at Harper's Ferry and the Navy Yard at Goeport, near Norfolk. They received, perhaps invited, into their State large bodies of troops, with their warlike appointments, from the so called seceded States.—They formally entered into a treaty of temporary alliance and co-operation with the so called Confederated States, and sent members to their Congress at Montgomery, and finally they permitted the insurrectionary government to be transferred to their capital at Richmond. The people of Virginia have thus allowed this giant insurrection to make its nest within her borders, and this Government has no choice left but to deal with it where it finds it, and it has the less regret as the loyal citizens have in due form claimed its protection. Those loyal citizens this government is bound to recognize and protect as being Virginia. As in the Border States so called—in fact the middle states—there are those who favor a policy which they call armed neutrality, that is an arming of those States to prevent the Union forces passing one way or the disunion the other, over their soil.—this would be disunion completed. Figuratively speaking, it would be the building of an impassable wall along the line of separation, and yet not quite an impassable one, for, under the guise of neutrality, it would tie the hands of the Union men, and freely pass supplies from among them to the insurrectionists, which it could not do as an open enemy. At a stroke it would take all the trouble off the hands of Secession except only what proceeds from the external blockage. It would do for the disunionists that which of all things they most desire; feed them well, and give them disunion without a struggle of their own It recognizes no fidelity to the Constitution, no obligation to maintain the Union, and while very many who have favored it are doubtless loyal, it is nevertheless very injurious in effect. Recurring to the action of the government, it may be stated that at first a call was made for 75,000 militia, and rapidly following this a proclamation was issued for closing the ports of the insurrectionary districts, by proceeding in the nature of a blockade. So far all was believed strictly legal.

At this point the insurrectionists announced their purpose to enter upon the practice of privateering. Other calls were made for volunteers to serve three years unless sooner discharged, and also for large additions to the regular army and navy. These measures, whether strictly legal or not, were venturned upon under what appeared to be a popular demand, and a public necessity, trusting then, as now, that Congress would readily ratify them. It is believed that nothing has been done beyond the constitutional competency of Congress. Soon after the first call for militia it was considered a duty to authorize the commanding General, in proper cases, according to his discretion, to suspend the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, or in other words to arrest and detain without resort to the ordinary processes and forms of law, such individuals as he might deem dangerous to the public safety. This authority has purposely been exercised but very sparingly Nevertheless the legality and propriety of what has been done under it are questioned, and the attention of the country has been called to the proposition that one who is sworn to take care that the laws be faithfully executed, should not himself violate them.—Of course some consideration was given to the questions of power and propriety before this matter was acted upon. The whole of the laws which were required to be faithfully executed were being resisted, and failing of execution in nearly one-third of the States. Must they be allowed to finally fail of execution, even had it been perfectly clear that by the use of the means necessary to their execution, some single law made in such extreme tenderness of the citizen's liberty that practically it relieves more of the guilty than of the innocent, should to a very limited extent be violated. To state the question more directly: Are all the laws but one to go unexecuted and the Government itself go to pieces lest that one be violated? Even in such a case would not the official oath be broken if the Government should be overthrown, when it was believed that disregarding the single law would tend to preserve it. But it was not believed that this question was presented—it was not believed that any law was violated. The provision of the Constitution, that the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require it, is equivalent to a provision that such privilege may be suspended when in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety does require it. It was decided that we have a case of rebellion, and that the public safety does require the qualified suspension of the privilege of the writ which was authorized to be made. Now it is insisted that Congress, and not the Executive, is vested with this power. But the Constitution itself is silent as to which or who is to exercise the power; and, as the provision was plainly made for a dangerous emergency, it cannot be believed the framers of the instrument intended that in every case the danger should run its course until Congress could be called together—the very assembling of which might be prevented, as was intended in this case, by the rebellion. No more extended argument is now offered, as an opinion at some length will probably be presented by the Attorney General. Whether there shall be any legislation upon the subject, and if any what is submitted is entirely to the better judgement of Congress. The forbearance of this Government had been so extraordinary and so long continued as to lead some foreign nations to shape their action as if they supposed the early destruction of our National Union was probable. While this, on discovery, gave the Executive some concern, he is now happy to say that the sovereignty and rights of the United States are now everywhere practically respected by foreign powers, and a general sympathy with the country is manifested throughout the world. The Reports of the Secretary of the Treasury, War and the Navy, will give the information in detail deemed necessary and convenient for your deliberation and action, while the Executive, and all the Departments, will stand ready to supply ommissions, or to communicate new facts considered important for you to know. It is now recommended that you give the legal means for making this contest a short and decisive one—that you place at the control of the Government for the work, at least four hundred thousand men and four hundred millions of dollars. That number of men is about one-tenth of those of proper ages within the regions where apparently all are willing to engage, and the sum is less than a twenty-third part of the money value owned by the men who seem ready to devote the whole. A debt of six hundred millions of dollars now is a less sum per head than was the debt of our revolution when we came out of that struggle, and the money value in the country now bears even a greater proportion to what it was then than does the population. Surely each man has as strong a motive now to preserve our liberties as each had then to establish them.

A right result at this time will be worth more to the world than ten times the men and ten times the money. The evidence reaching us from the country leaves no doubt that the material for the work is abundant, and that it needs only the hand of legislation to give it legal sanction, and the hand of the Executive to give it practical shape and efficiency. One of the greatest perplexities of the Government is to avoid receiving troops faster than provided for them. In a word, the people will save their Government, if the Government itself will do its part only indifferently well. It might seem, at first thought, to be of little difference whether the present movement at the South be called secession or rebellion, the movers, however, well understood the difference at the beginning; they knew they could never raise their treason to any respectable magnitude by any name which implies a violation of law. They knew their people possessed as much moral sense, as much of devotion to law and order, and as much pride in and reverence for the history and government of their common country as any other civilized and patriotic people. They knew they could make no advancement directly in the teeth of those strong and noble sentiments. Accordingly they commenced by an insidious debauching of the public mind. They invited an ingenious sophism, which, if conceded, was followed by perfectly logical steps through all the incidents to the complete destruction of the Union. The sophism itself is that any State of the Union may, consistently with the National Constitution, and therefore lawfully and peacefully withdraw from the Union, without the consent of the Union, or of any other State. The little disguise that the supposed right is to be exercised only for a just cause, because they themselves are to be sole judges of its justice, is too thin to merit any notice. With rebellion thus sugar-coated, they have been dragging the public mind of their section for more than thirty years, and until at length they have brought many good men to a willingness to take up arms against the Government the day after some assemblage of men have enacted the farcical pretence of taking their State out of the Union, who could have been brought to no such thing the day before. This sophism derives much, perhaps the whole, of its currency from the assumption that there is some omnipotent and sacred supremacy pertaining to a State—to each State of our Federal Union. Our States have neither more nor less power than that reserved to them in the Union by the Constitution, no one of them ever having been a State out of the Union. The original ones passed into the Union even before they cast off their British colonial dependence, and the new ones each came into the Union directly from a condition of independence, except Texas, and even Texas, in its temporary independence, was never designated a State. The new ones only took the designation of States on coming into the Union, while that name was first adopted for the old ones in, and by the Colonies were declared to be free and independent States. But even then the object plainly was, not to declare their independence of one another, or of the Union; but directly the contrary, as their mutual pledge and their mutual action before, at the time and afterwards has abundantly shown the express plighting of faith by each and all of the original thirteen. In the Articles of Confederation, two years later, that the Union shall be perpetual, is most conclusive, having never been S:ates, either in substance or in name, outside of the Union; whence this magical omnipotence of State rights, asserting a claim of power to lawfully destroy the Union itself?—Much is said about the sovereignty of the States, but the word even is not in the National Constitution, nor, as is believed, in any of the State constitutions. What is a sovereignty in the political sense of the term? Would it be far wrong to define it a political community without a political superior? Tested by this, no one of our States, except Texas, ever was a sovereignty, and even Texas gave up the character on coming into the Union, by which act she acknowledged the Constitution of the United States, and the laws and treaties of the United States made in pursuance of the Constitution, to be for her the supreme law of the land.

The States have their status in the Union, and they have no other legal status. If they break from this, they can only do so, against law, by revolution. The Union and not themselves, separated, procured their independence, and their liberty by conquest or purchase. The Union gave each of them whatever independence and liberty it had The Union is older than any of the States, and in fact it created them as States Originally some dependent colonies made the Union, and in turn the Union threw off their old dependence for them, and made them States, such as they are. Not one of them ever had a State constitution independent of the Union. Of course it is not forgotten that all the new States framed their constitutions before they entered the Union; nevertheless, dependent upon and preparatory to coming into the Union. Unquestionably the States have the power and rights reserved to them in and by the national constitution. But among these surely are not included all conceivable powers however mischievous or destructive; but at most such only as are known in the world at the time as governmental powers, and certainly a power to destroy the Government itself had never known as governmental merely administrative power. This relative matter of National power and State rights as a principal, is no other than the principle of generality and locality. Whatever concern the whole should be confided to the whole to the general government, while whatever concerns only the State, should be left exclusively to the State. This is all there is of original principle about it. Whether the National Constitution, in defining boudaries between the two has applied the principle with exact accuracy is not to be questioned. We are bound by that defining without question. What is now contested is the position that Secession is consistent with the Constitution, is lawful and peaceful. It is not contended that there is any express law for it, and nothing should ever be implied as law which leads to unjust or absurd consequences. The Nation purchased with money the countries out of which several of these States were formed. Is it just that they shall go off without leave and without refunding? The nation paid very large sums in the aggregate, I believe of a hundred million to relieve Florida of the aborigine tribes. Is it just that she should now go off without consent, or without making any return?—The nation is now in debt for money applied to the benefit of these so called seceded States in common with the rest. Is it just, either, that creditors shall go unpaid, or the remaining States pay the whole.—Part of the present National debt was contracted to pay the old debts of Texas. Is it just that she shall leave, and pay no part of this herself? Again, if one State may secede, so may another, and when all shall have seceded none is left to pay the debts. Is this quite just to creditors? Did we notify them of this sage view of ours when we borrowed their money? If we now recognize this doctrine by allowing the seceders to go in peace, it is difficult to see what we can do if others choose to go, or exort terms upon which they will promise to remain. The seceders insist that our Constitution admits of secession. They have assumed to make a national Constitution of their own, in which, of necessity, they have either discarded or retained the right of secession, as they insist it exists in ours. If they have discarded it, they thereby admit that on principle it ought not to be in ours If they have retained it, by their own construction of ours, they show that to be consistent they must secede from one another whenever they shall find it the easiest way of settling their debts; or effecting any other selfish or unjust object. The principle itself is one of disintegration and upon which no government can stand. If all the States save one should assert the power to drive that one out of the Union. It is presumed the whole class of seceder politicians would at once deny the power and denounce the act as the greatest outrage upon State right.—But suppose that precisely the same act, instead of being called driving the one out, should be called the seceding of the others from that one, it would be exactly what the seceders claim to do, unless, indeed, they make the point that the one, because it is a minority, may rightfully do what the others, because they are a majority, may not rightfully do. These politicians are subtle and profound on the rights of the minorities, they are not partial to that power which made the constitution and checks, from the preamble calling itself: "We, the people." It may well be questioned whether there is to-day a majority of the legally qualified voters of any State, except, perhaps, South Carolina, in favor of disunion. There is reason to believe that the Union men are the majority in many, if not in every other one of the so called seceded States, the contrary has not been demonstrated in any one of them. It is ventured to affirm this even of Virginia and Tennessee, for the result of an election held in military camps, where the bayonets are all on one side of the question voted upon, can scarcely be considered as demonstrating popular sentiment at such an election. All that large class who are at once for the Union, and against coercion, would be coerced to vote against the Union. It may be affirmed, without extravagance, that the free institutions we enjoy have developed the powers and improved the conditions of our whole people beyond any example in the world. Of this we now have a striking and impressive illustration. So large an army as the Government has now on foot was never before known without a soldier in it but who had taken his place there at his own free choice. But more than this, there are many single regiments whose members, one and another, possess full practical knowledge of all the arts, sciences, professions, and whatever else, whether useful or elegant, is known in the world, and there is scarcely one from which there could not be selected a President, a Cabinet, or a Congress, and, perhaps, a Court, abundantly competent to administer the Government itself, nor do I say this is not true also in the army of our late friends, now adversaries in this contest, but if it is, so much better the reason why the Government, which has conferred such benefits on both them and us, should not be broken up. Whoever, in any section, proposed to abandon such a Government, would do well to consider in deference to what principle it is that he does it, what better he is likely to get in its stead, whether the substitute will give, or be intended to give, so much of good to the people. There are some foreshadowings on this subject. Our adversaries have adopted some declarations of independence, in which, unlike the good old one penned by Jefferson, they omit the words "all men are created equal." Why? They have adopted a temporary national constitution in the preamble of which, unlike our good old one, signed by Washington, they omit "we the people," and substitute "we the deputies of the sovereign and independent States." Why? why this deliberate pressing out of view the rights of men and the authority of the people? This is essentially a peoples contest on the side of the Union, it is a struggle for maintaining in the world that form and substance of government whose leading object is to elevate the condition of men, to lift artificial weights from all shoulders, to clear to the paths of laudable pursuit for all, to afford all an unfettered start, and a fair chance in the race of life, yielding to the partial and to temporary departure from necessity. This is the leading object of the government, for whose existence we contend. I am most happy to believe that the plain people understand and appreciate this It is worthy of note that while in this, the Government's hour of trial, large numbers of those in the army and navy who have been favored with the offices, have resigned and proved false to the hand which had pampered them, not one common soldier or common sailor is known to have deserted his flag. Great honor is due to those officers who remained true despite the example of their treacherous associates. But the greatest honor and most important fact of all is the unanimous firmness of the common soldiers and common sailors. To the last man so far as is known they have successfully resisted the traitorous efforts of those whose commands but an hour before they obeyed as absolute law. This is the patriotic instinct of plain people, they understand without an argument that the destroying of the Government which was made by Washington means no good to them. Our popular Government has often been called an experiment. Two points in it our people have already settled, the successful establishing and the successful administering of it. One still remains—a successful maintenance against a formidable internal attempt to overthrow. It is now for them to demonstrate to the world that those who can fairly carry an election can also suppress a rebellion; that ballots are the rightful and peaceful successors of bullets, and that when ballots have fairly and constitutionally decided there can be no successful appeal back to bullets, and that there can be no successful appeal except to the ballots themselves at succeeding elections. Such will be a great lesson of peace, teaching men that what they cannot take by an election, neither can they take it by war, teaching all the folly of being the beginners of war. Lest there be some uneasiness in the minds of candid men as to what is to be the course of the Government toward the Southern States after the rebellion shall have been suppressed, the Executive deems it proper to say it will be his purpose then as ever, to be guided by the Constitution and the laws, and that he probably will have no different understanding of the powers and duties of the Federal Government relative to the rights of the States and the people under the Constitution than expressed in the inaugural address. He desires to preserve the Government that it may be administered for all, as it was administered by the men who made it.

Loyal citizens everywhere have the right to claim this of their government, and the Government has no right to withhold or neglect it. It is not perceived that in giving it there is any coercion, any conquest, or any subjugation in any just sense of those terms. The Constitution provides, and all the States have accepted the provision, that the United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a republican form of Government, but if a State may lawfully go out of the Union, having done so it may also discard the Republican form of Government, so that to prevent its going out is all indispensable means to the end of maintaining the guaranty mentioned.—When an end is lawful and obligatory, the indispensable means to it are also lawful and obligatory. It was with the deepest regret that the Executive found the duty of employing the war power in defence of the government forced upon him. He could but perform this duty or surrender the existence of the government. No compromise by public servants could in this case be a cure. Not that compromises are not often proper, but that no popular government can long survive a marked precedent, that those who carry an election can only save the government from immediate destruction by giving up the main point upon which the people gave the election. The people themselves, and not their servants, can safely reverse their own deliberate decisions. As a private citizen the Executive could not have consented that these institutions shall perish, much less could he, in betrayal of so vast and so sacred a trust as these people had confided to him, he felt that he had no moral right to shrink, nor even, to count the chances of his own life in what might follow. In full view of his great responsibility he has so far done what he has deemed his duty.—You will now according to your judgments perform yours. He sincerely hopes that your views and your actions may so accord with his as assure all faithful citizens who have been disturbed in their rights of a certain and speedy restoration of the laws, and peace thus dear to our course without guile and with pure purpose, let us renew our trust in God, and go forward without fear and with manly hearts

[Signed,] ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

WASHINGTON, July 4th, 1861.

Educational.

ST. FRANCIS' COLLEGE

Under Care of the Franciscan Brothers.

THIS INSTITUTION, SITUATED IN LORETTO, Cambria County, Pennsylvania, four miles from Summit Station, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, midway between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, was chartered in 1854, with privileges to confer the usual Collegiate Honors and Degrees. The location of the College is one of remarkable beauty in Pennsylvania—this portion of the Alleghany Mountains being proverbial for its healthy climate, bracing air, and picturesque scenery.

The Scholastic year commences on the FIRST MONDAY after the 15th of AUGUST, and ends about the 25th of JUNE following, to be divided into two Sessions. Students cannot return home between the Sessions. All the apparatus necessary for Land Surveying, Engineering, &c., &c., will be furnished by the Institution to the Students.

Instrumental and Vocal Music forms no extra charge. Students will be received of any age, from mere boys to the age of manhood.

TERMS—Board and Tuition, payable quarterly in advance.

Washing and use of Bedding, per annum, $100
Classical and Modern Languages, 10
Students spend Vacation at the College, 10

Reference can be made to the Rt. Rev. Bishop O'Connor, to the Rev. P. J. Reynolds, St. Mary's Loretto, and to other Clergymen of the Pittsburgh Diocese.

THE WEST CHESTER ACADEMY.

AT WESTCHESTER, PA., WITHIN two hours ride from Philadelphia, by the Pennsylvania Central, on the West Chester Branch Railroad. It re-opens the duties of the SUMMER TERM on the first day of MAY next, and closes on the last day of September. The School, therefore, has session during the SUMMER MONTHS. Pupils are received at any time, as vacancies occur. The average number of students is 150, under the charge of nine Teachers. The French, German and Spanish languages are taught by native instructors. For catalogues apply to

WM. F. WYERS, A. M., Principal, ap12:2md:eod at West Chester, Penna.

Furniture.

FURNITURE AND CHAIRS

AT

REDUCED PRICES

AT

JAMES W. WOODWELL,

Nos. 97 and 99 Third Street.

AND

111 FOURTH STREET,

CONSISTING OF

ALL VARIETIES OF STYLES AND FINISH,

SUITABLE FOR

Hotels and Private Dwellings,

☞ All orders promptly attended to, and the Furniture carefully packed and boxed. Steamboats and Hotels furnished at short notice. Cabinet Makers supplied with every article in the line.

FURNITURE FOR CASH.—A full assortment of Pittsburgh manufactured FURNITURE, embracing

BUREAUX,

BOOK CASES,

WARDROBES,

and every article needed in a well furnished dwelling, as well as a splendid assortment of OFFICE FURNITURE.

Constantly on hand and made to order. All the only terms on which business is done at this establishment is for CASH, prices are made accordingly. Persons in want of anything in the above line, would be advantaged by calling at

No. 97 THIRD STREET.

No. 103 Smithfield street, below Fifth.

J. D. FACKLER,
JOHN M IRWIN

NEW GOODS

—FOR—

SPRING AND SUMMER WEAR.

JAMES ROHR,

No. 89 Market Street,

HAS JUST RECEIVED AND OPENED a large stock of Scotch and Shaker goods, comprising one of the largest assortments to be found. Ladies', Misses' and Children's Boots, Shoes, Gaiters, Slippers, Operas, etc.

Mens', Boys' and Youths' French Calf Boots, Gaiters, Oxford Ties, Prince Alberts, Congress, Balmoral Shoes, Brogans, etc.

Boots & Shoes of every variety and style, which will be sold at PRICES TO SUIT THE TIMES.

All persons desiring to procure a bargain, would do well to call and examine the stock at 89 Market street. The proprietors are determined to sell cheap.

MANHOOD.

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED.

JUST PUBLISHED ON THE NATURE, TREATMENT, AND RADICAL CURE OF PREMATURE DECLINE OF SEMINAL WEAKNESS, Sexual Debility, Nervousness, Involuntary Emissions and Impotency, resulting from Self Abuse, &c. By Robt J. Culverwell, M. D. Sent under seal, in a plain envelope to any address, post paid, on receipt of two stamps. Address DR. CULVERWELL, 127 Bowery New York. Post Office Box No. 4586.

mh28:dm&w

COAL, NUT COAL, SLACK & COKE.—Having purchased the entire interest of my partners in the firm of BAILEY, MYERS & Co., I am now prepared to furnish to all former customers and the citizens of Pittsburgh, and vicinity generally, a superior quality of COAL, NUT COAL, SLACK and COKE, in large or small quantities. Orders sent through the Post Office, left at the Toll House of the Monongahela Bridge, or at the Works will be attended to with promptness.

Coal Works and Office, situated in South Pittsburgh, one square above the Monongahela Bridge.

17:2m JAMES M. BAILEY.

CRESSON SPRINGS, CAMBRIA COUNTY, PA.—This delightful and popular place of summer resort, located directly on the line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, on the summit of the Alleghany Mountains, twenty-three hundred feet above the level of the ocean, will be open for the reception of guests on the 15th of June, since last season the grounds have been greatly improved and beautified, rendering Cresson one of the most romantic and attractive places in the State. The furniture is being thoroughly renovated. The scenery of Cresson, and the sufferer from heat and disease, will find attractions here, in a first class Livery stable, billiard tables, Ten-pin Alleys, Baths, &c., together with the purest air and water, and the most magnificent mountain scenery to be found in the country.

Tickets good for the round trip from Philadelphia, $7.00; from Pittsburgh, $3.25.

For further information, address

JOHN P. LUDLOW, Cresson Springs, Cambria Co., Pa.

je17-1m

PROPOSALS will be received at the office of the Recording Registrar, in the Market Building, until the 9th inst., for the opening of Washington street, from Liberty street to Water, by ISAAC MORLEY, Recording Registrar.