The motion was carried to go Merchant Tailors, retary. The motion was carried to go into the election, when an inquiry was made by one of the Senators whether the present Secretary was really dead. It was rumored that he was at the point of death, and one of the Senators suggested that they wait until it was ascertained really what his condition was. The inquiry was made, and it was found that he was still alive. A motion was then made to indefinitely postpone the election of a Secretary which was carried by a vote of sixteen to fifteen. The matter is therefore disposed of for the present. The Senate then did a good thing by electing General Clark, of Vermont, who was a prominent candidate for First

Comptroller of the Treasury, as Reading and Executive Clerk. STEEL-PLATED STEAMERS. The New York papers say that Captain De Groot is building two, the stee plates of which are to be four inches bick, rendering the vessels shot and bomb proof, and protecting the boilers, These vessels he expects to sell to the government. Harper's Weekly, speaking of Stevens' bomb-proof battery, which has been so many years building says Mr. Stevens declares that if the vessel is fitted out according to his plans he will be willing to guarantee the capture of Sumter in a less time than it took the South Carolinians with their seventeen batteries. This vessel, when about to engage in action, is sunk so that its decks are just above the water. It mounts sixteen rifled guns in the bomb-proof casement, and two beavy columbiads on deck for throwing shell. Success of English convicts transport.
