

them upon her knee, who lavished upon them the rushing love of her noble and devoted nature, and who nurtured them from the very bosom of her life; and now, in the frozen expanse of a lion's and baffled ambition, they are stabbing at that bosom with the ferocity with which the tiger springs upon his prey. The President of the United States is heroically and patriotically struggling to baffle the machinations of these most wicked men. I have a boundless gratification in knowing that he has the courage to look traitors in the face, and that, in discharging the duties of his great office, he takes no counsel of his fears. He is entitled to the zealous support of the whole country, and may I not add without offense, that he will receive the support of all who justly appreciate the boundless blessings of our free institutions.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

PITTSBURGH: WEDNESDAY MORNING, JULY 24.

MR. HOLT'S SPEECH.

We commence today the publication of Mr. Holt's great speech, recently made to the citizens of Louisville. It is the most masterly, the most bold, the most eloquent, the most patriotic, and the crowning production which the present crisis in our national affairs has called forth from any of the great men of the nation. It places Mr. Holt in the foremost rank of the public men of the nation.

CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.

We desire that the reading public should understand that when we issue an extra it is distinctly headed with the word "EXTRA." The half-sheets which we are some times compelled to issue in the morning after our regular edition has been exhausted are half-sheets of our regular edition, and not extra, although the news-boys may term them as such. The buyer must examine for himself, for we have no control over the generation of news-boys.

LIGHT COMETH IN THE MORNING.

The worst news came first. The result of the disaster at Bull Run, although had enough, is not as bad as we were led to expect. The batteries were not all taken, and our loss is not nearly so great as was at first represented. Some accounts place it at no more than four hundred. Many of the missing troops have come into Alexandria. It will doubtless be some days before we have the exact truth. There is no doubt but that the rebel troops suffered severely—more probably than our own.

THE THIRTEENTH.

It is announced in the Dispatch that the Thirteenth Pennsylvania Regiment is on its way home, their term of service having expired.

THE RECENT BATTLE.

The New York papers of Monday morning are jubilant over the "victory" at Bull Run, on Sunday. It was a victory first and the repulse came afterwards. The spirit of our army was magnificent, and they marched into the battle singing patriotic songs, firm of step and light of heart.

GENERAL FREMONT.

Gen. John C. Fremont, accompanied by his lady and daughter, passed through the city yesterday, on his way to St. Louis, where it is understood he is to assume command of the federal forces. As the entrance of this "Wherever the authority of the Federal Government is recognized I will endeavor to maintain it—whatever the sacrifice." There spoke the American man, and the patriotic over of the Union.

TWICE BEATEN.

A private despatch from an official quarter at Washington states that McDowell once on Sunday twice and Johnston once on Sunday. A hundred thousand men under command of General McClellan will leave Washington in a few days to annihilate rebellion. The government is fully aroused, and will adopt no half way measures. If necessary the whole of the property of the South will be confiscated. The loss of the rebels at Bull Run is fully equal to ours, and the lesson is worth all its cost.

HIS NAME.

The name of the distinguished officer who takes the place of Gen. McClellan, in Western Virginia is Rosecrans, not Rosecrant, as it is generally spelled. He is an American born, and a graduate of West Point, and no relation to Shakespeare's Glendower.

TOO MUCH HASTE—WHOS RESPONSIBLE.

These who have made haste for us, and in the wake of the philosopher of the Tribune, have been endeavoring to bring the force of public opinion to bear upon Mr. Lincoln, to urge on the fight, are responsible for the disasters of Sunday to our army.

THE CAUSE OF THE PANIC.

It is stated that the cause of the panic which resulted in so disastrous a retreat of our army from Bull Run was as follows: Sherman's battery was at the extreme right or front of the battle, and with its eighteen guns rendered most effective service against the enemy's batteries as long as their ammunition lasted, but becoming exhausted it was then retired to retire to the rear of the line or extreme left. They did in good order and thus saved their battery, but the movements of this arm of the service are lightning, and the tentacles and soldiers seeing the batteries retreating to the rear along the line with lightning speed, supposed that the day was lost, and commenced to fly at once, thus losing a victory already won.

GEN. PATTERSON SUPERSEDED.

The following dispatches to the New York World, of Monday, appear to be official, and make the announcement that Gen. Patterson has been superseded by Gen. Banks, and that Gen. Dix is in command at Baltimore:

WASHINGTON, July 23.—General Banks has been designated to succeed Gen. Patterson at the Department of Annapolis as of Virginia, vice Gen. Patterson. Gen. Dix, New York, will take the place of Gen. Patterson.

DETAILS OF THE BATTLE AT BULL RUN.

Following is the account of the battle at Bull Run, previous to the grand rout of the Federal forces, as telegraphed to the Eastern press from Washington, under date of Sunday 23rd inst:

A most severe battle was fought today at Bull Run Bridge. The conflict was desperate, lasting over nine hours. The program, as stated in the first dispatch from Fairfax Court House, was carried out, until the troops met with a succession of masked batteries which were attacked with vigor and success after a severe loss of life. Our troops advanced as follows: Major General Johnston, Brigadier General J. M. Smith, Brigadier General T. A. Morris, July 23rd, 1861.

Col. Richardson, who distinguished himself in the previous engagement, proceeded on the left with four regiments of the Fourth Brigade, to take the battery on the hill on the Warren-ton road in the vicinity of the place where the last battle was fought. The flank movements were described in the first dispatch.

Col. James D. Cameron, of the Seventy-ninth (Highlanders) regiment of New York, is reported to be killed at Bull Run. Although Colonel of a New York regiment, he was a Pennsylvanian, having been born and having resided in this State. He was a younger brother of General Cameron, of the War, and when the New York Highlanders were organizing for service, they selected him, as one of the Clan Cameron in this country, for their commanding officer. This we believe was the first military position he ever held, but he entered upon it with zeal, and soon won confidence and attachment of the regiment he commanded. Col. Cameron was over fifty years of age. He was originally a printer, but since he came to manhood, he has been engaged in various public works. Of late years he had resided at Milton, Northumberland county. We believe he leaves no family.
