THE LORETTO SPRINGS,

CAMBRIA COUNTY, PA.

NOW OPEN.

THIS NEW AND DELIGHTFUL RESORT for those seeking either health or pleasure, is situated one mile from the village of Loretto, and four miles from Cresson station, on the Pennsylvania Central Railroad—from which to Loretto, there is a well constructed Plank-Road.

The Springs are about 2,000 feet above tide-water, and the air is always bracing and invigorating, the thermometer seldom ranging above 75° in Summer. The head waters of the Susquehana and Clearfield abound in trout, and the mountain ranges are filled with game, affording fine sport to those who are fond of such amusements.

The buildings are admirably constructed with respect to room and ventilation, and the whole fitted up with every appliance that can contribute to the comfort of the guests. The rooms are supplied with running Spring water, in marble baths, and hot, and cold Baths on each floor. Bath Houses for ladies and gentlemen, with water supplied from the lake, having Swimming-Cataract and Shower Baths, Bowling-alley, Billiard-Tables, &c., &c.

MONDAY MORNING.....AUG. 12.

To Provide for the Suppression of the Rebellion.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That whenever, by reason of unlawful obstructions, combinations or assemblage of persons, or rebellion against the authority of the government of the United States, it shall become impracticable, in the judgment of the President of the United States, to enforce, by the ordinary course of judicial proceedings, the laws of the United States within any State or Territory of the United States, it shall be lawful for the President of the United States to call forth the militia of any or all the States of the Union, and to employ such parts of the land and naval forces of the United States as he may deem necessary to enforce the faithful execution of the laws of the United States, or to suppress such rebellion in whatever State or Territory thereof the laws of the United States may be forcibly opposed, or the execution thereof forcibly obstructed,

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That whenever, in the judgment of the President, it may be necessary to use the military force hereby directed to be employed and called forth by him, the President shall forthwith, by proclamation, command such insurgents to disperse and retire peaceably to their respective abodes, within a limited time.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the militia so called into the service of the United States shall be subject to the same rules and articles of war as the troops of the United States, and be continued in the service of the United States until discharged by proclamation of the President: Provided, That such continuance in service shall not extend beyond sixty days after the commencement of the next regular session of Congress, unless Congress shall expressly provide by law therefor: And provided further, that the militia so called into the service of the United States, shall, during their time of service, be entitled to the same pay, rations and allowances for clothing as are or may be established by law for the army of the United States.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That every officer, non-commissioned officer or private of the militia, who shall fail to obey the orders of the President of the United States in any of the cases before stated, shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one year's pay, and not less than one month's pay, to be determined and adjudged by a court martial; and such officer shall be liable to be cashiered by a sentence of court martial, and be incapacitated from holding a commission in the militia for a term not exceeding twelve months, at the discretion of the court; and such non-commissioned officer and private shall be liable to imprisonment, by a like sentence, on failure of payment of the fines adjudged against them, for one calendar month for every twenty-five dollars of such fine.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That court martials for the trial of militia shall be composed of militia officers only.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That all fines to be assessed as aforesaid shall be certified by the presiding officer of the court martial, and shall be collected and paid over according to the provisions and in the manner prescribed by the seventh and eighth sections of the act of February 28, 1795, to which this is an amendment.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the marshals of the several districts of the United States, and their deputies, shall have the same powers in executing the laws of the United States as sheriffs and their deputies in the several States have by law in executing the laws of their respective States.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That sections two, three and four of the act entitled "An act to provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections and repel invasions, and to repeal the act now in force for those purposes," approved February 28, 1795, and so much of the residue of said act and of all other acts as conflict with this act, are hereby repealed. Approved July 29, 1861.

Supplies for England.

The population of the British isles has now reached nearly thirty millions. When we reflect that the United States, with all their immense territory, have but thirty-one and a quarter millions of people, this density of population in Great Britain and Ireland becomes a matter of wonder. Nor have we any idea that it has reached its limit. Ireland, which has been decreasing in people for the last twenty years, is undergoing a great change, which, in the end, must give its prosperity a more enduring basis, and so lead to the same steady multiplying of numbers there as in England; for it must be borne in mind that the increase in the British isles arises from the impregnable strength of their manufactures. Upon so limited an area, of course, they never could maintain so large a population in any other way, and precisely as the numbers augment the area of agriculture must diminish. Cities cannot expand nor manufacturing villages multiply without a corresponding falling off in the area of cultivation.

Nor is it likely that the manufacturing industry of England will soon be shaken. Her American market is not affected permanently by anything. Then with the great future looming up before her Canadian provinces as well as Australia, the demand for her goods must in her own colonies, so far from diminishing, is more than likely to be doubled. India, too, is becoming an immense market for British goods. Princely fortunes have already been made in that trade, and British capital, enterprise and talent are lavishly embarked in all kinds of efforts to develop and build up their commercial influence in India. Her African and West Indian colonies also furnish steadily increasing markets, so that British goods are sure of the future, and consequently the progress of population in her isles is not less assured. There can of course be no limit to the growth of a manufacturing population, if it can receive supplies of provisions from abroad, which can easily be done in this case.

Here, then, is a great provision market, which we Americans should obtain and keep. It is a sure source, and with our immense domain and characteristic enterprise, if we can produce provisions in any required amount. If the western dealers, however, they will understand, and appreciate the advantages opened to them by this European trade, and not hoard their grain and hold up for prices which they cannot get. A present sacrifice will bring them in abundant profits in the future, but without such sacrifice their trade must be disastrous during the continuance of the war. While western exchanges and currency were in such a chaotic state there was good reason why western produce should not be sent east, but there is none now, as the exchanges and currency are both becoming practicable. To some extent this produce is coming forward, and, as the new crops are now beginning to reach a market, we urge the question upon the early consideration of the whole mercantile community.

Commercial Revolution in the United States.

In the midst of the ruins of an immense commerce that has grown up and prospered in the United States for the last twenty years, notwithstanding the temporary revulsions produced by over-trading—a commerce founded on peace and the integr
