It is altogether too late to remedy this on the day of election, when men are presented, be-tween whom, so far as intelligence or integrity is concerned, there is no differ-ence. Reform must commence with ourselves. Let influential, honest men agree to sacrifice some comfirt, and not office, though it cost some sacrifice of money to do it. Take, for instance, our legislative ticket, the most important office in a republican form of govern-ment. Weak men are selected because to the United States, the right to their too late to remedy this on the day of services shall be forfeited, and such persons shall be discharged therefrom. It follows, he adds, of necessity, that no claim can be recognized by the military authority of the Union for the services of such persons when fugitives. McClellan, but every member of his suite was strictly forbidden to disclose anything learned within the rebel lines. They were driven out by a man belonging in Washington, and he has not been so reticent. He was recognized by some of the rebel officers who had seen him in this city, but they asked him no questions. He was closely questioned by a number of private States in the Union. Hence no ques-tion can arise as to fugitives from ser-vice within the States and territories in light of states and territories and territories and territories and terr on the north side of the city, and about the regiments stationed there. The rebels profess to have 80,000 men at Manassas, and many more between that point and Richmond. The troops there are poorly clad, but better than those of the Maryland Regiment, which is encamped at Fairfax. Many of the latter are barefoot.
