KILLED IN A COAL PIT .- On Wednes-Cay morning last, Robert Hagerman was killed in Bowman's coal pit, in Versailles township, about three miles from McKees-port. He left his house immediately after breakfast and went to the pit to get out some coal for his own use. On entering, he cleared away a quantity of dirt and sounded the siste as is customary. He had just got to work when a large portion of slate fell upon him, occasioning instant death. His son, a lad of twelve or fourteen years, accompanied him to the pit, and when the accident occurred, he started immediately for help. His son says the only words his father uttered were 'Oh, my!" When found his skull was crushed in a most frightful manner, and rested on his right knee; he presented a horrible
