PRESIDENT AND CABINET.

If the pending contest with the secessionists is a death struggle for con stitutional liberty and law, are we justified in stopping to consider who administers the government? The unparalleled unanimity with which all parties rushed to the side of the lawful administrators of government in the commencement of the struggle, is a sufficient answer. Upon the heels of a defeat of a grand army of voters of the brave old Democratic party, they were called upon to testify their dom, has but to be a little outspoken, devotion and magnanimity and patriot and tell some unpalatable truth, and he
