THE REPUBLICANS AND THE

The Republican party, which swept like a tornado over the country last November, seems to be rocking and convulsing with internal commotion. Had it not been for war breaking out, ere now that organization would be extinct In times of peace, such a party could not exist longer than the period when government patronage was exhausted So far as principle is concerned, there is no common one among them; they are composed of the odds and ends of for mer defunct combinations, the most cor rupt, designing and profligate being in

The question asked, in the last senthe slavery questson, is mere hatred of the God has given us over to destruction slave-owner; and nothing can content them until the institution of slavery is forever obliterated. As to the condition of the slave, after "he becomes a freeman." that is quite another question. It is enough that the slave is made free, if only to become a vagrant and a pauper. These extreme abolitionists are blinded have destroyed the Roman army, and cept the alternative of locking forward to by the vision of emancipation, and are saved the city of Jerusalem. Such was lives have been years of dependence and their belief, in which they were encourslavery, and one generation would not aged by many northern journals, and let be sufficient to teach or compel them | me say that if this belief had proved to become self reliant.

But ere this period of self-reliance arrives for the manumitted negro, is there our utmost strength may be required no dread of servile insurrections, with to crush this gigantic rebellion; if disall their fiendish and attendant horrors? Is the slave owner going to give up "his property" without a struggle to retain it? These practical considerations never occur to the heated brain of the antislavery enthusiast; misnamed philanthropy ignores them, and would renew the horrors and attrocities of St. Domingo, rather than abandon its chimerical teachings. We can not answer the Tribune's question, as to the condition of "American slavery," when the rebellion is subdued; we believe, however, that abolition teaching will neither ameliorate the condition of the slave, nor bring the war to a speedy and successful termination. It is too much absorbed in the contemplation of the slave, to be of much use in crushing out rebellion.

"No Pent-up Utica." Everybody has heard the lines, "No pest up Utica contracts our powers, But the whole boundless continent is ours."

But very few people know the author, or satisfaction of these who wish to figure in what poem they occur. The Portsmouth (New Hampshire) Journal says that they were written by one Jonathan Michael Sewall, a Portsmouth poet, as an epilogue to Addison's play of Cato, on the occasion of its performance by an amateur company in that city in 1788. The whole production was one of decided power. The spirit of the Revolution entered into every expression: We give a few lines:

"And what new gleams with dawning rays Once blazed in full-orbed majesty at Rome.
Did Rome's brave senate nobly strive t' oppose The mighty torrent of domestic foes, And bold y arm the virtuous few, and dare The desperate perils of unequal war. Our Senate, too, the same bold dead has done, And for a Cato armed a Wastington!

Bise, then, my countrymen, for fight prepare, Gird on your swords, and, fearless, rush to w For your grieved country nobly dare to die, And empty all your reins for interes. No pensup Utica contracts our powers, but the wnole boundless continent is ours?

Utica, a city older than any in the vicinity of ancient Carthage, was the place where Cato died. This fact, with the above extracts, will sufficiently expisin one of the most expressive quotations in our language-a quotation which has been frequently made by the most diverguished orators, Daniel Webster among them.
