EFFECT OF THE WAR UPON BUSINESS.

The effect of a change from a state of peace to one of war, last spring—a war the most disturbing and alarming of all wars—was to stem and paralyze the country, destroy confidence, and put a stop both to commercial and manufacturing enterprises.

While the effect of the war upon business is a subject of inquiry, we are obliged to send to foreign countries for money, for supplies of food and clothing, and for arms, such a war as this would exhaust and impoverish the country very soon.

The effect of the vast expenditure of the government upon the general business of the country is a very interesting subject of inquiry. We are obliged to send to foreign countries for money, for supplies of food and clothing, and for arms, such a war as this would exhaust and impoverish the country very soon.

What We Have Achieved.

Notwithstanding our little drawbacks, we have done a good deal for the war broke out. When it began, Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri were substantially lost to us from misconceptions, errors, and want of political knowledge on the part of the President and his Cabinet, in not leading their influence to the Peace Congress.

LATEST NEWS FROM THE SOUTH.

The following extracts are taken from Southern papers received in New York by the steamer McCallan: REPORTED BATTLE NEAR WEST POINT, VIRGINIA.

The Richmond Dispatch, of the 17th, mentions this rumor: A report was brought by the York river train yesterday afternoon, that Gen. Mansfield had been killed in a battle near West Point, and the inference was that a fight had commenced on the peninsula.
