

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY. PITTSBURGH.

FRIDAY MORNING, NOV. 1. For Afternoon and Midnight Telegraph and Local News See First and Third Pages.

The Pittsburgh Gazette still suspects that the Post is not sincere in its support of the Administration in its efforts to crush the Southern rebellion.

Now, as a mere matter of information for our readers, will the Gazette inform us what it has been doing since the rebellion broke out? We know of nothing except the publication of frothy nonsense about "liberty, and slavery and emancipation," and a general repetition of the stuff by which our troubles are only complicated and increased.

At the commencement of the late session of the present Congress, Secretary Cameron, with a prudent forecast, recommended in his report that authority and means should be given to the War Department to provide for such increase of military facilities as might become necessary for military purposes.

The Gazette informs us that we "inhabit Republicans" when we say that but for the assistance of the Democratic party in crushing rebellion, the government might as well abandon the contest.

It seems by the advice from Richmond that large quantities of lumber are being transported toward Mississippi for the purpose of providing winter quarters for the Confederate army.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times, under date of October 11th, writes as follows: "It seems now beyond all doubt that O'Donnell has been overruled, or has changed his mind, and that there will be a common action between France and Spain and I suppose with England, in the affairs of Mexico."

The TREASURY RIOT.—Colonel Steeple, in command of the Forty-third Indiana Regiment, which destroyed the type and presses of the Terre Haute Journal on the night of the 21st, has issued an order severely deprecating the riot and offering to give the authorities all possible facilities for the detection and punishment of the offenders.

More Alleged Treachery.

The New York papers are again in a state of excitement over a rumor of treachery connected with our naval expedition. That sensation journal, the Herald, is particularly alarmed, and says: "There is a painful rumor in circulation among the officers on this station that a clerk of one of the men-of-war has been missing for three days, and it is also supposed of having taken the signal book of the vessel with him."

The Philadelphia Ledger, in reply to the Herald's lamentation, pertinently remarks that there may be some small grains of truth in it, but the intended treachery can be no more than a mere rumor.

Such rumors seem to be public property at Washington, for we find that the newspapers of New York say them that trouble. Every detail connected with the naval expedition is given with a pains taking minuteness that must be most valuable information to the rebels, and enable them to know precisely what force is sent to defend it.

The election of representatives in the Federal Congress, from Virginia, took place on the 21st instant, under the auspices of the convention held at Wheeling last August. Under the law any two freeholders may hold a convention at any place within the congressional district. Probably all, or nearly all of the districts in the State have, in compliance with Gov. Pierpont's proclamation, chosen a representative.

SHAKESPEARE IS QUOTED ON ALL OCCASIONS.

As being good authority for almost everything. An instance in point is the immortal Bard, writing for the Philadelphia Inquirer says: "SHAKESPEARE THE POET 'FOR ALL TIME.'—Nothing can make the fact of the universality of Shakespeare's genius more clear, than his wondrous power in the present, as well as the past, than the remarkable passages scattered through his works, bearing upon our fearful times."

This student, after this introduction, gives several quotations from King John, and closes his researches with the following from Richard, the Second: "The SPEAKERS OF REBELLION. Tell Bolingbroke, for your madhouse he stands, that every stride he makes upon the globe, is dangerous treason. He is come to open the purple womb of heaven, and to let down the crown of life in peace. But ere the crown he looks for lies in peace, shall it receive the power of England's face. Change the complexion of her maid pale peace, to scarlet indignation, and bid blow for blow, rebellion strike rebellion's blow."

Further from Europe.—Earl Russell on the American War. The late foreign arrival brings us a paper delivered by Earl Russell, at New-Castle upon Tyne, in which he has made the following allusions to the American War. It will be seen from this speech that as matters now or when the war terminates the result will be horribly disastrous all around.

Let us look for a moment at another part of the world, at another country, the United States of America. It appears to me that it would not be unwise to consider the world, which though not carried out exactly the same principles as our own, has been conducted with great wisdom. I would say, a very great misfortune if any country were to be so conducted as the United States. I am sorry to say that those events have happened, and we now see two parties contending together, not upon the ground of principle, but upon the basis of the original cause of the conflict—not contending with respect to free trade and protection, but with respect to the right of the old world to have control of the one side for empire and the other for power.

CORONATION OF THE KING OF PRUSSIA.

It appears that nobody at Berlin is particularly pleased about this great coming event, although it is one hundred and sixty years since Prussia has witnessed the splendors of a coronation ceremony. The festival, it is said, has hardly enough of the popular character about it to attract the masses of the people. So, indeed, it would appear from the long programme published in the official papers of Prussia, which give details of each day's performance, from the 13th to the 27th instant inclusive.

On the 14th the entrance into Königsberg, on the 16th, the reception of the foreign envoys by their majesties; on the 17th, a chapter of the Black Eagle; on the 18th, the coronation and the grand banquet; the 19th, a drawing-room and concert at court; the 20th, the King, Queen, and Crown Prince, and Prussia's first minister, go to Dantzic; on the 21st, at Bromberg, they are to be present at the laying of the first stone of a commemorative monument; the 22d the entrance into Berlin; the 23d, a drawing-room at the King's palace; the 24th, a court and concert; and the 25th, a dinner at the Crown Prince's and a ball at the royal palace. The 22d will be the great day for Berlin. A mounted corps of burghers receive their majesties at the Frankfort gate, and the grand gala procession on the palace square, a salute of 101 guns is to be fired, and at night the city will be illuminated and fireworks let off.

Gas and electric light will be lavishly expended on the illumination of Berlin, and balloons, it is said, will take up to a considerable height fireworks which will there explode. The prices demanded for apartments are enormous. One foreign minister was asked 300 thalers for the first floor of a shoemaker's house. His agent delayed to conclude the bargain, and a few days later he had to pay 700 thalers ($500) for the same rooms—for four days!

THE GREAT TEST OF ALL CHEMICALS.

It is a well known fact that the most accurate test of all chemicals is the test of the microscope. The microscope is a powerful instrument, and it is by its aid that the most minute particles of matter are made visible to the human eye.
