Our people are getting very much disgusted with the deceptive announcements placarded upon bulletin boards to sell papers and, as it turns out, the public. We are all anxious to be gratified, but will not consent to have the momentary gratification of an announce ment that the rebels have suffered a Waterloo defeat, when the very dispatch upon which the joyful intelligence is predicated reveals a totally different state of facts. A penny profit does not justify jokes. The only excuse to be offered is ignorance. We are not the only sufferers in this matter: it is common to every city. But, after all, the wonder really is that the army is so well officered as it is, and the number of men of fine faces and figures, with the appearance and manner of the soldier about them, which one sees in the streets and in the camps, shows what a large military element there must have been among the American people, for the class of which I speak, is out of all proportion to the habits of the people, and yet it has dropped easily and nat urally into the discharge of military duties. It will be long, however, before the whole mass is thoroughly leavobedience.
