Court of Quarter sessions--Important Charge of Judge Mellou. The December term of the Court of The list of grand jurors was called over, sixteen answering to their names. Twenty-three traverse jurors answered to their names at the first call. The returns of the constables of parties selling liquor in their respective districts were then received. As is generally the cers made their returns.

The grand jury was now sworn by Mr.

Fullwood. It is constituted thus: J. W Blackburn, Foreman; Sam'l Andrews, Henry Ackley, John Barkley, David Carnahan, Jas. Carson, jr., Wm. Carry, John Dougherty, Wm. Ewing, Jacob Forcer, A. H. Gilleland, Wm. Hune, Rdward Kearns, Caleb Lee, jr., John Moore, Jas. Righy.

Judge Mellon then proceeded to charge that the Commissioners have drawn funds the grand jury, at great length, on the subject of our railroad indebtedness and have not liquidated them. the heavy rate of county taxes. After remarking upon the light calender for the term, and the national troubles, the Judge spoke of the avalanche of debt with lichard performance of the avalanche of debt with lows: Judge spoke of the avaisance of debt. And we have no occasion to despond. We should be thankful that our railroad lebt is not twice as much as it is. It might as well, perhaps, have been the one as the other. There was no reason for its being so little except the modesty and forbear-ance of the different rairoad companies; and by a judicious compromise, or cum-pulsory adjustment, its present amount may be greatly reduced, so as to leave it possible to pay it, and still have some income from our property left. If we get this matter once rightly adjusted, and are not overwhelmed with other public burdens, we might, by inaugurating a system economy and retrenchment and reform a our public expenditures, again restore our finances to a healthy condition.

Then follows a suggestion for settling the amount of liability: "As the proceeding necessary to apply this remedy would Quarter Sessions commenced yesterday morning, Judges Mellon, Adams and Brown on the bench.
