Among the reasons given in the Gazette, of Saturday, why Mr. Weaver our not to be elected, was one that on as had enough already." These editors evaged politicians. Competency and charoter are not to be considered in selectng our public servants-but the assu rance of the Gazette in alluding to any one having "enough," is too broad to pass unnoticed. That paper already absorbs the income of three or four lucrative places, and we are informed that one of its proprietors, who now holds a Paymaster's commission, is contemplating the modest undertaking of having himself elected Clerk of the Pennsylv. nia Senate. Such unparalleled impertinence as such people exhibit, in talking about others having had enough, while grasping at every available thing themselves, is characteristic only of extreme selfishness, aided by a sublimity of impudence peculiar to the professiona place hunter and politician

One great point has been ascertainedthe destructives in Congress cannot control the Administration; they are in a minority, and can only embarrass what they cannot master. The Southern people too are beginning to learn that the North do not desire the prostration of their institutions, but only the preservation of the Union; and, what is better still, the fiery Abolition press of the North has partially acandoned its fierce indes against Southern institutions,-Our adversity has done us some good in these respects; it looks as if faction had almost wasted its fury, and that we were nearly on the eve of better and happier days.
