MAJOR RUSSELL ERRET. The Gazette, yesterday, contained ar article in reference to Mr. Erret, fron which we have been tempted to selec the following pathetic paragraph: "Mr. Erret has foreaken his business his family and his home, with all the endearments thereaf, and has placed his tim and talent at the disposal of his country With other devoted and self-sacrificing countrymen, attached to the great South ern expedition, he is risking his life in the nce of his principles, and suffering all the hazards and discomforts attending camp life in an enemy's country. A CITIZEN. Some smart fellow appears in the Dispatch of yesterday, over the signature of "Citizen," appended to a column of in-

Democrats young for the Republican candidates. This "Citizen" is evidently no common personage in his own estimation; but when he again resorts to anonymous scribbling, we would advise him to mask deeper, so as to conceal his ears. The following paragraph is a sample of this thick-headed "Citizen's" communication:

"The farce which has been enacting for weeks has informed our whole community of the fraud attempted to be passed upon them in the candidacy of Mr. Weaver: and the merchantable chattel wished to h made of Democratic voters. A clique of scurry politicians, sufficiently conceited t hink themselves capable to manage the ple and monopolize all offices in county colity, are now striving to sell the Dem-not interty to their own purposes. A few journals, nowever, departing from the get al sentiment, and considering themselves in spired exclusively by the interest of our cotton liactures, spoke of an altience between Franc The Democratic party of this county and England, but the unwecome te epyon which they encountered in public opinion lad them quickly to a vare just appreciation of the t us in sect of France and fle-toms tergiversations, more or less disemble "Citizen" cannot comprehend, have re- they have arrived again by a residening curve at ta fused to enter into partizan conflicts, so programme of neutrality which was the first intinctive cry of surprised opinion. But such a situation was too simple, too reas:

French journals, which receive or formerly did receive confidences, affirm that France, without yet departing from her neutrality, sustains England and gives her its "moral" support. The first result of that moral support would be the recognition of the legitimacy of England's griefe; the second, the recognition of the Souther States and the moral institution of slavery; the hird might perhaps be to engage us actively in the quarrel and to cause a rup; ure between France and the United States. As to the legitimacy of the griefs of England if hould be observed that, according to the principles sectled in the Congress of Paris "the neutral ag covers the enemy's goods, with the excaption f contrained of war."
