Foland Tournshy, Mahoning Co., Ohio. Oct. 31, 1861. I resumed my former mode of life. A fortnight passed, when one evening going to the hotel for tea, I heard that Colonel Barwell's daughter had eloped with young Manley—for a Gretna-green marriage in Tennessee, it was supposed—and that the father was in hot pursuit. Then, I remembered the letter given to Jake, and the significant glances between Miss Celia and the unknown young man. I saw once more, the spirited girl, full of enthusiasm and romantic nonsense, fancying herself a beroine.
