

PITTSBURGH POST

FRIDAY, JANUARY 17.

DR. BROWNSON ON ABOLITION AGITATION.

Among the able men of the Northern States, who have published the most remarkable warnings of the dangerous tendencies of Abolition agitation, Dr. Brownson of Brownson's Review, stands pre-eminent. Mr. Clay, Mr. Webster, and their compatriots in Congress, dwell upon their subject upon many memorable occasions. They predicted the very state of affairs, which has overtaken us if we persisted in secessionist agitation.

They know that there were disunionists in the South, who would turn Northern agitation against their institutions to a dangerous account, and use it, finally, as a pretext for breaking up the government. But Northern Abolitionists heed not; they went on agitating until they became so fanatic as to proclaim union with the South "a covenant with death and an agreement with hell."

Among the Northern men who confided in these extreme fanatics, was Dr. Brownson; he not only denied their positions in regard to slavery as a political institution, but justified it upon high moral authority. Calhoun was his model as a statesman, and after him, a poor imitation of that able man, Barnwell Rhett, of South Carolina. Of all the men of the South, who ever figured in the councils of the nation, this Mr. Rhett was, perhaps, the most offensive to Northern prejudices and principles.

Twenty years ago he belonged to a little party of South Carolina disunionists, who never let an opportunity pass to exhibit their peculiar institution, and condemn and disparage Northern customs and society. This man was too violent even for the people of South Carolina, and even now, when one would think that the most ultra would be demanded to conduct her councils, we find this Rhett left in retirement, and more moderate men chosen to conduct her public affairs.

The great peculiarity which gave Mr. Rhett some notoriety, was the extravagance of his theories and positions; he was an advocate of slavery in the abstract, and of Southern ones, then had the courage to avow it. This extravagance recommended him to extraneous men, and among the number was Dr. Orville Brownson.

In January, 1847, Mr. Rhett delivered a speech upon a bill excluding slavery from the Territory of Oregon, which President Polk subsequently signed. In commenting upon this speech, Dr. Brownson says:

"A conductor some years since of the Boston Quarterly Review, was once occasioned to express our views on the subject, and though many changes have come over us, and we can hardly be recognized by our readers as the same men who were then, our estimation of them remains unaltered, except that, if possible, we now hold them in still greater detestation. They are a band of mad fanatics, and we have no language strong enough to express our abhorrence of their principles and proceedings."

We have no sympathy with the Abolitionists. Man, we are ready to maintain, may have property in man, a valid right to the services of his slave—no dominion over his soul; and where the master is true Christian, and takes care that his people are instructed and brought up in the true Christian faith and worship, slavery is tolerable, and for negroes, perhaps, even more than tolerable."

One would scarcely imagine that a gentleman full fifty years of age, entering these opinions upon the necessity of the propriety of slavery, could ever become a leader in a league with hell. But it is too common to see the brightest intellects rushing from one extreme to another. Of this, Dr. Brownson is a lamentable example. His notions of emancipation now, are no more reasonable and practical than were his ideas of slavery in 1847.

After disposing of the moral view of the institution, Mr. Brownson proceeds to the discussion of the constitutional objections urged by the opponents of slavery to its extension over free territory. In this he went the extreme length claimed by the extreme southern— that the government possesses no power to prevent its extension. He says:

"For ourself we agree perfectly with Mr. Rhett in his position, that the political sovereignty with us rests originally not in the Union, but in the States, which have made the Union, and from which the Union derives its existence and all its powers."

The effort here is to prove the paramount authority of State rights, in defiance of national legislation; this sentence also contains all now contended for by the rebels, that the States are above the Union, and justified in seceding from its authority. "The more perfect Union," which was formed by amendments to the old Constitution, Rhett and Brownson discard; and were he now a citizen of a southern State, his doctrines here recorded— independent of his inclinations to rush to extremes— would unquestionably lead him to the front rank of secession. Such papers as the Pittsburgh Gazette will undertake to answer these weak points in Dr. Brownson by saying that "he has changed his opinions." But this will not excuse a man of his remarkable ability and learning. Or if he is to be excused, for changing his opinions so radically, why then we shall contend that his opinions are not worth anything. Such men are dangerous, and well calculated to lead their followers astray. Experience has demonstrated that what Mr. Brownson said of abolitionists in 1847 is nearly true, and we therefore select him then, and experience since, to refute what he tells us now. Upon that occasion, he continued as follows, and we commend it to the attention of our readers as being admirably descriptive of the people to whom it refers:

"There is no greater evil possible to humanity than is threatened by these Abolition and other associations which swarm over the land, and seek to expunge from the laws of God and of humanity, and it is the duty of every one who loves his God, his country, to oppose to them the firmest and most persevering resistance. They are self-created, irresponsible, and without any authority to decide on any moral or political question, except what they arrogate to themselves. Whatever they resolve, others are engines do nothing of all true liberty. They are formed for and against every thing, and usurp control over both the private and public opinions. Already have they become the terror of the South, and are intolerable. They are everywhere; they annoy us to our down-sitting and uprising, in our sitting and drinking, in our sleeping and waking. They overawe justice, they make the Judge hesitate in his charge, and justice nearly impracticable. The magistrate fears to encounter them, and must obtain their permission, before venturing to discharge his duties. If we yield to them on one point, we must on another take the law from their dictation on one occasion, must on all occasions, and hold our property, our lives, and our consciences only at their mercy. Let us break up today the legal order of the country in reference to slavery at their bidding, and to-morrow we must do it in reference to some other question, next day to still another. All society then is gone, and the whole is a state of anarchy and a state of war. We are at the mercy of a few fanatics, who will do us as they please. In the balance with the evil we should do, we should do it, never trample on law and constitution in obedience to the mandates of self-created irresponsible associations, which no well-ordered State can safely tolerate. A thousand times better is it to be the slave of the most brutal master, than to come under their lawless and fanatical sway."

SOUTHERN NEWS.

We make the following extracts from Southern journals:

Major General, Etc. The Nashville Courier, of the 14th inst., has published an account of the rebel forces, which has been appointed major general of the rebel forces. The legislative council of Kentucky, established on the 18th inst., elected H. B. Harris and Wm. E. Simms Senators to the Confederate Congress.

Gen. Price. A movement is on foot in New Orleans to present General Price, of Missouri, some suitable memorial of the estimation in which he is held by the people of that city, and the South generally, for his efficient service to the South in the pending struggle. Missouri.

Death of an Officer. The Nashville Union announces the death of Major J. H. Gooden, of 3rd Regt. Tenn. Major Gooden was attached to Col. Sargent's regiment, and died at Morristown, East Tennessee. He was a son of the president of the Branch Bank of Tennessee.

Run the Blockade. The Mobile Advertiser, of the 28th ult., announces the arrival of a schooner, with cargo of coffee, soda, starch, brimstone and other necessaries. She was pursued and fired on by the blockade runners, and fled to sea under the protection of the guns of Fort Morgan.

Salt. The Winchester (Va.) Free Press mentions that Mr. Charles F. Brown, of that place, recently lost a valuable horse, named "Old Tom," for which he was offered five thousand dollars. He refused to take it, and brought the horse back to his stable, where it died.

Miscellaneous. The people of Charleston, S. C., are discussing the plan of forming a Central Park on the ground now occupied by the Arsenal.

The taking of Blount. The New Orleans Delta, of the 31st inst., contains the following interesting account of the capture of Blount, by the Union forces.

Another Message from Gov. Letcher. On the 14th inst. Gov. Letcher, of Virginia, sent another message to the Legislature of that State, accompanied with a letter to the Hon. Mr. Stanton, of the United States, in relation to the joint resolutions recently adopted by the Legislature of Virginia, which declare that the separation of the States is final and irrevocable, and that they will, under any circumstances, entertain any proposition on any subject which might tend to the restoration or reconstruction of the United States.

The occurrence of the past six months here, we had to call Democrats to our aid, and we are as equal under the Constitution as we were before. The Union is the basis of our government, and the Union is the basis of our government.

Richmond paper publishes an advance sheet of a report prepared for the War Department, which is a very interesting document.
