A GLOOMY PROSPECT.

Two weeks have brought about a very remarkable change in the sentiments and calculations of the leading Southern newspapers. After their defeat at Mill Spring, in Southern Kentucky, they declared Bowling Green a Sebastopol; and when that was evacuated, they expected Forts Henry and Donelson to prove their Gibralters. They did very well, to be candid, at both of these engagements; but, as usual, they underrated the intrepidity of their Northern opponents. These disasters have spread a gloom throughout the South, but no where was it, or is it, more visible than in Richmond. Their papers are beginning to assail the rebel government with the ferocity of men who have been deluded. Alluding to the inauguration of Davis, the Richmond Whig of the 21st, said that, "the whole pageant of the morrow will be a bitter mockery and a miserable compensation for the rain of a free people." Instead of joy, enthusiasm and hope being visi-ble sitter installation of the new Presi dent for six years, all was gloom, de pageant of the morrow will be a bitter dent for six years, all was gloom, de right to insist that her voice be heard to express the honest conviction on the on this subject, in which she has so conduct of the war; if so, he wanted to baked meats " of Mill Spring, Fort Henry and Donelson," did coldly furnish solution of this Union, however much to be depresented by other States would Mr. Mr. forth the marriage tables" at Richmond; but instead of their tempting the new that, in a spirit of conciliation, she calls policy intended to trammel our military government to est, the ohief himself re- upon her sisters to frown down every sembled an old man who had lost his attempt to revive a subject which has, spirit and patience in trying to please in the hands of wicked and ambitious a young and fretful wife; while the calanities that have befallen our she, notwithstanding his promises and nation; that she calls upon them as co-exertions, wept bitterly over her folly in inheritors of the great patrimony bea abandoning her parent's home.
