PITTSBURGH:

SATURDAY MORNING, MARCH 1.

LOCAL AND GENERAL NEWS.

A Soldier Killed on the Railroad.

On Friday morning Coroner McCloskey held an inquest upon the body of Adam H. Mash, of Col. Leman's 108th Regiment, who came to his death in the following manner: The regiment reached this city from Kittanning, on Monday, and proceeded east the same night, by the Pennsylvania Railroad. The deceased, a large, powerful man, volunteered to stand guard on one of the platforms, to keep the men from jumping off the train. While engaged in this duty, and when some twelve miles east of this city, he fell from the train, which passed on without stopping. He lay almost insensible until Tuesday morning, when he was found by some railroad men, and so far recovered as to be able to tell his name, and how he was hurt. He was brought to the city, and placed in the Western Pennsylvania Hospital Tuesday morning. His left leg had been crushed by a car wheel, the left hip and right shoulder severely bruised, and also right side of the head lacerated. On Tuesday evening Dr. Gallaher amputated the leg, and although the patient recovered somewhat from the shock, he soon began to decline, and died on Thursday afternoon. Dr. Reed held a post mortem examination, and testified that the man died from the injuries received. A verdict was found accordingly. Marsh was about thirty-five years of age and has a wife and six children. He was a charcoal burner, and resided at Scrubgrass, eight miles from Kittanning. The body will be kept at Devore's until to-day at noon, and if not claimed by his friends, will be buried.

HORSE RACING AT AGRICULTURAL FAIRS.—The New York World has the following. Many of our readers will concur with the writer, and hope that this confirmed decision may be in our own State:

A recent decision at Rochester has probably banished all practice which should never have been commenced at the agricultural fairs. Judge Gumaer has decided that the racing of horses for premiums on those occasions is contrary to the spirit and letter of the statute in the State. His exposition of the law in this regard was, that the practice was formally attacked will probably prevent any further such display of that sort on such occasions.

The offer of prizes for the best female equestrienne conflicted with the views of many of the most discreet friends of the agricultural fairs. Gallantry or some other feeling caused silence at it did not abate opposition to by that subject, for many found it impracticable to engage in the race without a violation of the rules of propriety. The ground of objection to the race was that it was not in keeping with the character of the fairs for fitting

But the extension of patronage to the trotting horse is to include the fleet and fleet horse is determined many to oppose all such displays on such occasions; and that portion of the community will be particularly gratified to find that the late decision has blown sky-high all such race-course operations at the agricultural fairs—in other states as well as in our own.

THOMAS CARROLL, son of Hamilton Carroll, of West Pinley township, Washington county, attached to Captain Farrabee's company, a young man of excellent character, was killed in the late fight at Bloomery Gap.

Rebels Leaving Columbus.

GENERAL NELSON AT NASHVILLE.

HOUSES PLUNDERED BY REBELS.

INDIGNATION AGAINST GOV. HARRIS.

RAILROAD BRIDGE DESTROYED.

&c., &c., &c.

ST. LOUIS, February 28.—The Memphis papers of the 19th say that General Polk issued orders yesterday that the track of the Memphis and Ohio railroad be torn up, and the bridges destroyed, preparatory to the evacuation of Columbus and the demolition of fortifications. The Columbus forces are to fall back to Island No. 10, about forty-five miles below Columbus, which it is said completely commands the river, and can be fortified with heavy guns and made impregnable against any river attack.

The Democrat's Clarksville dispatch of the 26th says: The rebels soldiers before leaving Nashville plundered many of the dwelling and business houses, and excited great alarm among the people. Several of the rebels were shot by the citizens whom they were robbing.

Gen. Nelson is in command at Nashville, Gen. Buell still being on the north side of the river.

The Union sentiment is very strong, and our troops were received with the greatest cordiality.

Great indignation was expressed against Gov. Harris, who was fairly driven away by the Union men, they having become bold at the proximity of the Union troops, and dared to assert their rights. Before leaving, Harris made a speech, recommended the citizens to burn their private property, and calling on Tennesseeans to rally and meet him at Memphis, but no one paid any attention to him, and it is not thought he will receive any considerable reinforcement.

Gen. Crittenden's command had joined Gen. Johnston's at Murfreesboro.

The railroad bridge at Nashville was destroyed by order of Gen. Floyd, against the urgent entreaties of the citizens, which caused much indignation.

A British Prize steamer Captured.

NEW YORK, February 28.—The British prize steamer Labuan, captured on the 1st inst., off Brecca Chicea, a small village near the Rio Grande, has arrived in charge of the officers of the United States sloop of war Portsmouth, by which vessel she was taken in custody. The Labuan is an iron vessel, 243 feet long, and built at a cost of £3,800. She had been employed in the Baltic trade, and was chartered in November by the De Jersays, of Manchester, for six months, to run between Havana and some part of the Southern coast. Her outward cargo consisted of various articles, including a large quantity of blankets.

It is estimated that the charterers cleared £40,000 on the cargo. When she was captured, a steamer, loaded with cotton, was inside of the bar waiting an opportunity to come out to her, but as soon as the Portsmouth anchored, she moved up the river. The Captain and super-cargo of the Labuan were on shore, and remained there probably for prudential reasons—The Labuan was sent to Ship Island, and thence ordered here by Commodore McKean. She has aboard the crew of the schooner Wave, of New Orleans, which was captured an hour previous while en route from New Orleans to Matamoras, with a cargo of tobacco and cotton. The Labuan belongs in Hull.

Post-offices in Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina Re-established.

WASHINGTON, February 28.—The First Assistant Postmaster, General Hasson, is engaged in sending out instructions, and making arrangements for re-establishing post-offices and post-routes, as our armies advance into the so-called Confederate States. A. H. Markland is following our forces into Tennessee, and J. J. Miller, also an agent of the Department, in this connection, is operating in the southern part of Kentucky. The postoffice at Nashville, and those in the eastern part of North Carolina, will soon be re-opened. The latter State is to be supplied with mail by sea.

From California.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 27.—The ship Charger, forty-nine days from Hong Kong, has arrived. The steamer Cortes, from Oregon and British Columbia, bringing $10,000 in gold, has also arrived.

The weather throughout the Northern coast has been very cold. Many persons on their way from Portland to the mines have frozen to death. Thousands are detained at Portland until spring opens, who recently left California for the new Eldorado.

The whale ship Joseph Grinn, it has arrived from Paita, Peru, with 1,500 barrels of sperm.

SELECT TALE.

THE RAGGED SOLDIER.

A TRUE STORY OF THE REVOLUTION.

Just at the close of the Revolutionary war, there was seen somewhere in one of the small towns of central Massachusetts, a rugged and forlorn looking soldier coming up the dusty street. He looked about on the cornfields tasseling for the harvest, on the rich bright patches of wheat for the sickle, and on the green potato field with curious eyes. So at last thought Mr. Towne, who was walking leisurely behind him, going home from the reaping of his meager. The latter was a stout farmer, dressed in home made brown linen trowsers, without suspenders, vest or coat. The ragged soldier stopped under the shade of a great sugar maple, and Mr. Towne overtaking him, stopped also.

"Home from the wars?" he asked.

"Just out of the British clutches?" replied the man; "I've been a prisoner for years." He rejoined suddenly.

"Can you tell me, who lives in the next house? Is it yours?"

"No" replied Towne, "Tompkins lives there. That house and farm used to belong to a comrade of yours, as I suppose; his name was Jones, but he was shot at Bunker Hill, and his widow married again."

The soldier leaned against the tree.

"What kind of a man is he? I mean what kind of people are they there? Would they be likely to let a poor man have something to eat?"

"If Tompkins is out you'd be treated first rate there. Mrs. Tompkins is nice women, but he is the snarliest cur that ever gnawed a bone. He is a terrible surly neighbor, and he leads her a dog's life. She missed it marrying the fellow, but you see she had a hard time of it with the farm. Jones went off soldiering, and when my son came back he said he was dead—he saw him bleeding to death on the battle field—she broke right down and this Tompkins came along and got into work for her, and he laid himself out to do first rate. He somehow got on the blind side of all of us, and when he offered himself to her, I advised her to take him, and I am sorry I did it. You had better come home with me. Always have a bite for any poor fellow that has fought for his country."

"Thank you," kindly returned the soldier, but Mrs. Tompkins is a distant connection of old acquaintance. The fact is, I used to know her first husband, and I guess I will call there."

Mr. Towne watched him as he went up to the door and knocked, and saw that he was admitted by Mrs. Tompkins.

"Some old sweetheart of hers, may be," said Mr. Towne, nodding to himself. "He comes too late; poor women, she has a hard road to hoe now." Then Mr. Towne went down home to supper and we will go in with the soldier.

"Could you give a poor soldier a mouthful to eat?" he asked of the pale, nervous women who opened the door.

"My husband does not allow to give anything to travelers," she said, "but I always feel for the poor soldiers coming back, and I'll give you some supper if you won't be long eating it," and she wiped her eyes with her white and blue checked apron, and set with alacrity about providing refreshments for the poor man; who had thrown himself in the nearest chair, and with his head leaning on his breast, seemed too tired even to remove his hat from his face.

"I am glad to have you eat, and I will not hurry you up for anything," she said in a frightened way, "but you will eat quick, won't you? for I expect every moment he will be in."

The man drew his chair to the table, keeping his hat on his head as though he belonged to the society of Friends, but that could not be, for the "Friends" do not go to the wars. He ate heartily of the bread and butter and coal meat, and how long he was about it.

Mrs. Tompkins fidgeted. "Dear me," she said to herself, "if he only knew, he wouldn't be so cruel as to let Tompkins come and catch him here." She went and looked from the window uneasily; but the soldier gave no token of his meal coming to an end. "Now he is pouring vinegar on the cold cabbage and potatoes. I can't ask him to take those away in his hand. Oh dear how slow he is! hasn't the man any teeth?" At last she said mildly, "I am very sorry to hurry you, sir, but couldn't you let me spread some bread and butter, and cut you some slices of meat to take away with you? My husband will use abusive language to you if he finds you here."

Before the soldier could reply, footsteps were heard on the door-stone at the back door, and a man entered. He stopped short and looked at the soldier as a savage dog might look. Then he broke out in a tone between a growl and a roar.

"Hey-day, Molly, a pretty piece of business! What have I told you time and again, madam? You'll find you had better mind your master. And you, you lazy, thieving vagabond, let me see you clear out of my house and off of my land a good deal quicker than you came on the premises."

"Your house! and your land!" exclaimed the soldier, starting suddenly up, erect and tall, and dashing off his hat with a quick, fiery gesture. His eyes flashed like lightning, and his lips quivered with indignation as he confronted the astonished Tompkins. The latter was afraid of him, and his wife had given a sudden, nervous shriek when the soldier first started to his feet, and flung off his hat, and had sunk trembling and half-fainting in a chair, for she recognized him.

"You hain't any business to interfere between me and my wife," said Tompkins, sulkily, cowed by the attitude of the soldier.

"Your wife!" exclaimed the soldier, with the very concentration of contempt expressed in his voice, and pointing to him with an indignant finger.

"Who are you?" asked Tompkins, with an air of effrontery.

"I am Harry Jones, since you ask," replied the soldier, the owner of this house and this land, which you will leave this very hour! As for Molly," softening his tone as he turned to the woman, now sobbing hysterically, "she shall choose between us."

"O Harry," sobbed she, while Tompkins stood dumb with astonisment, "take me, save me."

With one step he was at her side, holding her in his arms. "What did you mean, treating this poor child so? Did you think because she had no earthly protector that there was not a God in heaven against you."

"No man who is cruel to a woman is ever truly brave, and Tompkins slunk away like a beaten spaniel.

The next day had not passed away before everybody in the town knew that Harry Jones had come home alive and well to rescue his much-enduring, patient wife from a worse constraint than that of a British prison;—but what they all said, and what Harry said, and what Molly felt, I must leave you to imagine, for here the legend ends.
