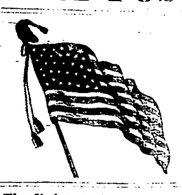
DAILY POST.



The Union as it was:
The Constitution as it is!

SATURDAY MORNING, MARCH 22.

☞ Reading matter on every page.

A PARALLEL.

The historian, Mr. Sparks, in his life of Washington, thus quotes from a private letter written by the Father of his country, during the time that he was so bitterly assailed by calumniators at home:

"My enemies take advantage of me. They know the delicacy of my situation, and that motives of policy deprive me of the defence I might otherwise make against their insidious attacks. They know I cannot combat their insinuations, however injurious, without disclosing secrets which it is of the utmost moment to conceal.

From this it will be seen that Washington was not free from detraction, but was its victim even in the most critical period of our revolutionary struggle. General McClellan could, a week since, have adopted every line of the above paragraph, and have applied it to himself; but like the great man who wrote it, our young General preferred to suffer the stings of calumny rather than endanger plans which his judgment approved. Indeed, the most attractive feature of McClellan's character is his aversion for display and notoriety. We do not find him going about from one section of the army to another, 'inflicting stereotyped speeches upon them about our glorious flag;' nor do we see him scheming among a gathering of gaming politicians, whose only interest in this struggle for our nation's safety is merely to put money in their purses. From the day he took command of the army of the Potomac, he has acted with charming propriety, and has borne up against a mountain of unmerited and atrocious slander never before inflicted upon one so young. Gen. Washington had only to fear the slow coaches of his day, before railroads or even canals were invented; now every click of the telegraph in Washington dots down a slander, when paid for, and, annihilating time and space, it appears at the same time in every section of the Union.

Gen. Scott, the father of the field, in handing over his command to his young successor, with drowning eyes and choking utterance, feebly said: "General, farewell: God bless you and give you success: yours is a gigantic undertaking; you will encounter great difficulties and opposition—opposition from great men and little men: men in Congress and out of it: from popular impatience and otherwise. But be firm in your plans: carry them out, whatever be the clamor, and you must succeed."—The old veteran knew of what he was talking; he had been a victim himself, and knew McClellan would have to encounter the same spirit of detraction which, like ravenous fishes after "a new trimmed vessel," ever darts its venom at those who least deserve it. He implored the confidence and patience of his countrymen, and promised them, within a certain time, satisfactory results. Has he not kept his promise? Has not the fighting for the past six weeks been "quick, terrible and bloody?" and has it not also been decisive for and satisfactory to our arms? His plans being matured, he takes the field in person, not to silence malicious censure, but because the time has arrived for doing so. In his spirited address, the other day, to his army, he said: "For a long time I have kept you inactive, but not without a purpose; but the period of inaction is passed." * * * * "In whatever direction you may move, however strange my actions may appear to you, ever bear in mind that my fate is linked with yours."

These lines of the General's address are as replete with good sense and strong encouragement as they are with patriotism All that snow remains is the terrible shock of arms which is to give victory to our cause; and in reading the brief address of the commander-in-chief, we are reminded of the blank verse of an impetuous Sovereign before making his final charge upon the enemy:

"Fiery expedition nerve this arm.
And fatal may fall on crushed rebellion."

☞ We have heard of a great many little acts of vengeance being performed by Postmaster General Blair, but his discontinuing the publication of the Allegheny letter list in the Dispatch, simply because of its heroic advocacy of John C. Fremont, is beneath contempt. We might exclaim, "Oh! shame where is thy blush."

The malice of the Blair family is most persistent: let them once determine to destroy an adversary, or remove an obstacle, and they make every thing bend to its accomplishment. It is now evident that the object of their present fear and hatred is the Pittsburgh Dispatch, and we would not be at all surprised to hear of the Postmaster General issuing an order preventing its free circulation through the mails. But if that functionary thinks to intimidate the soul of "Rob Roy," by discontinuing the publication of the Allegheny letter list in his paper, he has, we can assure him, mistaken his man. The disinterested champion of abolition for the past quarter of a century is not to be deterred from what he conceives to be his duty, by a thousand Blairs. We say, therefore, to our indomitable neighbor, go on; be not alarmed or intimidated by this attempt to crush the freedom of the press; defend the commander of the Mountain Department from the assassin stabs of the Blairs, and you will have the approval of your own conscience, if not the publication of the Allegheny letter list. Public, like private virtue, is ever its own reward.

It is a favorite allegation with Abolitionists that Democrats set slavery above the Union. We have the record of the Abolition faction in Congress that they set anti-slavery above the Union. Democrats set neither slavery nor anti-slavery above the Union, but insist that one and the other shall be left just where the framers of the Constitution left them, and just where President Lincoln, in his recent special message, said they belong: with the States

☞ The Gazette, as if to emulate the egotism and fulsome self-flattery of two other city journals, came out yesterday with a foolish article about its circulation. Our neighbors should know that the community regards these complimentary notices of themselves, as being a confession of their weakness and decay, and not of strength. No respectable newspaper should ever indulge in such exhibitions of vanity and self-esteem. Besides, our neighbor cannot hope to rival the papers it alludes to in the department of humbuggery, upon which they chiefly rely: it is too heavy and dull; is always too stupid, except when occasionally stirred up by the Morning Post. The Gazette can not expect to compete with the sensation papers alluded to. If not thought impudent, we would suggest that it confine itself, exclusively, to the publication of Wendell Phillips' and Fred. Douglass' speeches: these, in connection with an occasional paragraph from the Tribune slandering Gen. McClellan, would be all its readers could reasonably expect: at all event, it is about all they at present receive.

☞ Yancey, the rebel commissioner, who is chewing the cud of bitter recollection in Fortress Monroe, came home, it is said, from England, for want of funds. He stated that as soon as he made a raise, he would return and renew negotiations for the recognition of the Southern Republic. Alas for the uncertainty of all human calculations! instead of Yancey returning to hob nob with our trans-atlantic kindred, to enter into treaties for the permanent division of his country, he will now have leisure to reflect upon the infamy of his recent proceedings, commencing with his efforts to break up the Charleston Convention—"old Master" supply of cotton not the best, too, or Yancey would doubtless have negotiated a temporary loan; or perhaps he was jealous of the Alabamian talents and eloquence, which are of a high order, and refused to have the honor of getting him out of England. With the Southern Minister to the Court of St. James's we may rest content: Yancey is now exactly "cut and dried" at Fortress Monroe, and will not soon again cross the Atlantic to divide honors, which legitimately belong to the "Minister Plenipotentiary of the Confederate Government."

N. B.—Since writing the above we learn by telegraph that Yancey has not been captured, but is now in New Orleans, telling lamentable stories of the failure of his mission in England.

GEN. McCLELLAN.

This ingenious officer is bound to shine more brightly the more his enemies slander him. Gen. Buell, in his report, which is evidently supremeditated, speaks as follows:

"I beg to say to the General commanding the army that I have endeavored to carry out the very minute instructions given me by him before leaving Annapolis, and thus far events have been singularly coincident with his anticipations. I only hope that we may in future be able to report in detail the remaining plans of the campaign. The only thing I have to regret is the delay caused by the elements."

FOREIGN NEWS.

By the Anglo Saxon, from Liverpool and Londonderry on the 6th and 7th inst., we have five days later news from Europe. The intelligence of the Fort Donelson victory caused an advance in American securities in London, and a depression in cotton. The London Times and Morning Post, while forced to acknowledge the importance of the victory, endeavor to depreciate its effect. The Paris correspondents of the London papers represent the popular feeling in the French Capital as being uneasy. Many hundreds of arrests have been made, and all men suspected of being chiefs of barricades in former insurrections have been imprisoned. The Emperor has sent a quarter million francs from his private purse to the suffering workmen at the great industrial centres. Mr. Peabody, the American banker of London, has offered to give half a million dollars to the Albert Memorial, in case it has the form of a charitable institution. Other wise he will expend that sum in building houses for workingmen in London.

What the Rebels Think of Our Military Movements.

[From the Richmond Examiner, March 7.]

That misfortunes are often blessings in disguise is a proverb of many languages. Those lately suffered by the Southern Confederacy, in one essential point, illustrate its truth. At the end of this war we may look back on Fishing Creek, Dranesville, Roanoke, Henry and Donelson as the true causes of our salvation.

Had not the Northern army made these general movements in midwinter, the people and the government would have lounged through the spring as they did through the winter and autumn, and the true campaign would have found us with half an army. Had not the impatience of the Northern people and the pressure of the European cabinets forced the hand of McClellan, and had he been able to assemble his troops and stores in the position he desired, without a conflict to rouse the attention of the Southern people to what was going on, our condition in April and May would have been tenfold more dangerous than it now is. The disasters we have suffered are mortifying to us and exhilerate our enemies; but they have startled without crippling the Confederacy. Had it lain still two months more, with the army dwindling daily under the furlough system, disgusted with the inaction of stationary camps, while the government was squabbling with the generals, and the people sinking into indifference, we would have been overrun between the 15th of April and the 1st of May.

Fortunately for us the Northern government was unable to wait. Fortunately, its first movements secured success on the frontiers, while the season incapacitated their armies from attaining great results in consequence of those victories. The facts that have put the United States beside themselves with frantic joy have had an effect equally powerful, though of a different description, on the people of the Confederacy. Never has a resurrection been more complete. Every man, in and out of place, was satisfied by those events that he must take part in the common defence if he desired to escape ruin. The army is no longer diminished by furloughs. Its ranks are rapidly filling. The volunteers of twelve months have nearly all re-enlisted, and those who have not done so will be forced to it. New regiments and companies arise like the harvest that Cadmus sowed. Drafts are decreed, without hesitation, by all the States, and the advocate of conscription no longer preaches in the desert. If the government has the capacity to wield the force of the country, there is at least no longer a doubt but that it will have that force under its command before the Northern troops can make any considerable advance towards the heart of the Southern territory.

MARCH.

BY BAYARD TAYLOR.

With rushing winds and gloomy skies,
The dark and stubborn Winter dies;
Far off, unseen, Spring faintly cries,
Bidding her earliest child arise:
March!

But streams still held in icy snare,
On southern hill-sides melting bare,
O'er fields that motley colors wear,
That summons fills the changeful air.
March!

What though conflicting seasons make,
Thy days their field, they woo or shake
The sleeping lids of Life awake,
And hope as strongly for thy sake.
March!

Then from thy mountains, ribbed with snow,
Once more thy rousing bugle blow,
And East and West, and to and fro,
Proclaim thy coming to the foe.
March!

Say to the pickets, chilled and numb,
Say to the camp's impatient hum,
Say to the trumpet and the drum:
Lift up thy hearts, I come! I come!
March!

Cry to the waiting hosts that stray
On sandy sea sides far away,
By sunless isles and gleaming bay,
Where Southern March is Northern May:
March!

Announce thy self with welcome noise,
Where glory's victor eaglet poises
Above the proud heroic boys
Of Iowa and Illinois:
March!

Then down the long Potomac's line,
Shout like a storm on hills of pine,
Till cannon ring and bayonets shine:
"Advance! the Chieftain's call is mine:
MARCH!"

ITEMS IN BRIEF.

JAMES LESLIE, Jr., formerly chief clerk of the War Department, was rejected by the Senate as Consul to Nice, and Wm. Moran, Jr., as Consul to Bayonne.

THE New York Tribune's Washington correspondent takes precautions that no credit shall be given to Gen. McClellan for a successful campaign, as follows:

"In a word, the army will move and will win. But no thanks to the general commanding. He will go forward because he dare not stand still. He will conquer because he could not help it if he were to try."

A CORRESPONDENT of the Indianapolis Sentinel, who was at the battle of Pea Ridge, says:

Hood's loss was great; his was tremendous. The battle-field was literally covered with his dead and dying. No accurate computation can yet be made; to-day that they had fallen by hundreds would not give you any idea of his loss.

GEN. S. R. CURTIS, under whom the recent great battle in Arkansas was fought and won, is not only a Buckeye by birth, but is a native of Licking county, having been born about four miles from Newark, on Ramp Creek.

SPEAKING of the articles abandoned by the rebels at Manassas, a correspondent says:

One thing seems significant: Tracts and religious books are plenty, and soiled and mutilated Testaments are scattered thickly everywhere; but not a plug of tobacco or a drop of whisky was left behind.

The continued silence respecting the movements of the main body of the army of the Potomac is ominous. It is certain that movements of the greatest importance are being made. Within a few days the news will be afoot.

DURING the last three months the London Critic has counted up eighteen deaths of females, clearly attributed to the fashion of wearing crinolines.

COL. EDWARD RICHARD SPRIGG CRANCH, in command of the department of New Mexico, is a native of Kentucky, aged between forty and forty five years. He graduated at the West Point Military Academy in 1836, graduating in June, 1839, in the same class with General Halleck and other noted officers.

BELLE has not yet settled all the rebels, although he keeps a running account with them.

THE Southern Confederacy has ordered that all free negroes who do not volunteer shall be impressed in the public service.

IT is a very true, as the Abolitionists say, that if there had been no slaves there would have been no war. But may it not be also true, that if there had been no Abolitionist there would have been no war?

WHY do officers usually wear their swords in the street, while tailors never wear their shears, nor bricklayers their trowels?

Extensive and Extraordinary Shop-Lifting.

The Concord (N. H.) Democrat mentions a case of stealing in that city without parallel. A woman who has lived in Concord for a number of years, made a voluntary confession to some of her friends, last week, wherein she stated that she had been pilfering from the stores in that city for a dozen years past. She had several trunks packed full of all sorts of dry goods and millinery. Silk dress patterns, thousands of skeins of silk, hundreds of pairs of kid gloves, shawls, shoes, &c., were found, being worth originally, it is estimated, $2,000. It is thought she is partially insane.

THE Committee of Ways and Means have somewhat modified the tax bill. The tax on flour has been taken off at the instance of the Rochester Mills, who claim, under the reciprocity treaty, that Canada could undersell them. The tax on iron is made specific, instead of ad valorem; that on newspaper advertisements three instead of five per cent., and on net instead of gross receipts; that on leaf and stem tobacco is reduced on its manufacture; the tax is raised on umbrellas, parasols and hoop skirts, from specific to five per cent. ad valorem; that on omnibus passengers is removed altogether.

Colonel Corcoran.

A mystery seems to hang about the whereabouts and condition of Col. Corcoran, against whom the rebels seem to have a peculiar spite. Col. Wood and Col. Cogswell both are represented as saying that they had conversation with prisoners from Charleston, who said they had not seen him for several days previous to their quitting that place, and inferred therefrom that he had been either removed to another prison or sent further South. Though it is well understood that the President has made special exertions to procure the release of Col. Corcoran, yet it is equally well understood that the rebel authorities will consent to give him up only on condition that Smith, the condemned privateer or pirate, shall be surrendered to them.

Expenses of the United States Cavalry.

General Stoneman was before the Committee on Military Affairs in the Senate on Monday, and examined in reference to the reduction in the cavalry force. He stated that the expenses of a single cavalry regiment are $680,000, and that the expense of the unnecessary excess of the present cavalry force is $25,000 daily.

The Heroic Sailors of the Cumberland.

The scenes on board were heart breaking. Two of the gunners at the bow guns, when the ship was sinking, clasped their guns in their arms, and would not be removed and went down embracing them. One gunner had both his legs shot away, and his bowels opened and protruding, but he made three steps on his raw and bloody thighs, seized the lanyard and fired his gun, falling back dead! Another lost both arms and legs, yet lived, and when they would assist him, cried out, "Back to your guns, boys! give 'em h—ll! Hurrah for the old flag!" He lived till she sunk.

A Prompt Movement.

When the late advance of the Army of the Potomac was made, Gen. E. D. Keyes, then commanding a division, but now a corps d'armee, received his orders at 12 o'clock at night. In less than ten hours thereafter his entire division had been marched twenty miles in perfect order, over bad roads, and was comfortably encamped, ready in arms, spirit and discipline, to meet in battle any equal number of men in the world. Such a march is pronounced by good military men almost without parallel in the history of war.

A Slight Cold, Cough, Hoarseness or Sore Throat, which might be checked with a simple remedy, if neglected, often terminates seriously. Few are aware of the importance of stopping a Cough or Slight Cold in its first stage; that which in the beginning would yield to a mild remedy, if not attended to, soon attacks the lungs.
Brown's Bronchial Troches were first introduced eleven years ago. It has been proved that they are the best article before the public for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, the Hacking Cough in Consumption, and numerous affections of the Throat, giving immediate relief.
Public Speakers & Singers will find them effectual for clearing and strengthening the voice.

AMERICAN WATCHES
FOR AMERICANS.
No more English or French rubbish, made to sell, but not to keep time.
WHY SHOULD AN AMERICAN BUY a foreign Watch, when he can get a better one at home?
Why should an American needlessly enrich foreign Watch manufacturers, at the expense of our own artisans?
Why should an American send gold to England and France, our covert but bitter enemies, when gold is so much needed at home?
Why should an American buy an imported Watch, which, in nine cases out of ten, will cost more to keep in order for one year than its original price, and which was never intended to keep time, under any circumstances?
Why should Americans not patronize more generally American manufactures, and thus emancipate themselves from the thraldom of English capital, French fashions, and Continental gew-gaws?
The American Watch Company's Watches are particularly adapted for soldiers' use, being most substantially made, and not liable to get out of order, either in marching, riding or fighting.
Sold by all respectable Jewellers in the loyal States.
Wholesale orders should be addressed to
ROBBINS & APPLETON,
Agents of the American Watch Company,
