Dying Out.
It is idle to talk of "courage and resolution, whose spirit is victory or death," when arranged against courage equally as great, and with resources many times greater. In such a contest the victory must be with the stronger side. However desperate may be the resistance of the rebels, this must be the result eventually. Daring now is at an end, as a means of keeping up the spirit of rebellion. The steady march forward of 200,000 men, including the rebels on every side, and at every point victorious, is a fact which does not admit of being ignored or explained away on the hypothesis of weak and inefficient leaders. The weakness is in the cause. It is the rebellion which is dying out, and not the skill or the resolution in the people can stop the onward career of the armies of the government, or prevent their final success. It may be difficult in the rebels to admit the fact, but every day's events must bring them nearer and nearer to this conviction.

Slaves of the Holy Cross.

At present over two hundred sick and wounded are at Mount Holy Cross. Some will be removed in a short time to Cairo and St. Louis. While I should so to the wounded bodies of so many of our brave soldiers, I thank God for the practical care of government and the generosity of private charity, that has provided so well for the suffering of our heroic troops. Large and well ventilated wards, and comfortable beds are provided for a thousand patients. Sixteen Sisters of the Holy Cross, from South Bend, Indiana, are constantly attending the wants of our wounded men. I was informed by Mother Angela that the Sisters are eight more in a day. I was gratified to hear every sick and wounded man had a nurse in the highest terms of the nursing care and attention of these devoted Sisters.

Abolition Correspondence.

The New York Correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer, alluding to the late meeting of the Philadelphia Convention, says: "The Abolition brethren take pains to conceal their delight at the meeting and eulogizing of Wendell Phillips at Cincinnati, last evening. All such things they will help the good cause, and only aggravate the movement of John Brown's soul, which is supposed to be unquenchable. It is not as if it were not for the annual meeting of the American Anti-Slavery Society in this city, for which arrangements are now making. Indeed, so free and frequent are the congratulations of the people, that it is already supposed that the meeting will be the eyes of the disappointed Brownian Union."

What Next?

There is a building a railway and ground through the city of London. Deep down beneath the gas pipes and water pipes and sewers, a large artery will be drawn in the overflowing surface of that mighty city. The first portion of this great work, extending from 11th Street to Victoria Station, will be opened by the first of May next. It will be so wide and well lit that it will seem more like a well kept street at night than a collection of passages. It passes right under the Flint street ditch, the lowest and foulest of the London sewers.

SELECT TALE.

THE "LILY OF THE VALLEY."

In the month of May, 1851, I passed a very pleasant week at Geneva, Switzerland, tarrying two days in one of the little villages near the banks of Lake Lemano.

It was fortunate enough to meet with a family who talked good French, the head of which was the host of the party. In other words, the children, kept up the day-day festival, and though I was not quite in time to witness their merry making, I was fortunate enough to meet with a family who talked good French, the head of which was the host of the party.

The day was lovely, and looking from the window of my hotel I watched the great barges, with their masts and rigging, as they came down the lake of Geneva. The breeze was whispering the waves, and gently rippling the surface of the lake. The scene was too lovely for any thought of resting indoors, so depending to the beach, I hired a comfortable boat, and rowed across the lake.

The boat was very comfortable, and the rowers were good. I was in time to see the great barges, with their masts and rigging, as they came down the lake of Geneva. The breeze was whispering the waves, and gently rippling the surface of the lake.
