On Friday evening about 8 o'clock, pistod shots were heard by Mr. J. M. M'Geehan who had played the game upon him, and the police again started in search of the two, who were both believed to be here. On Wednesday night they were found at the Monongahela House, where they had been since Sunday, by the force of Mayor Sawyer. Meantime Mr. Shape had gone East and was not here to identify his man. It was thought, however, that had gone East and was not here to identify his man. It was thought, however, that they might have been guilty of other offences and they were accordingly locked up in the tombs to await developements.

They gave their names as J. Reynolds and Henry Palmer, from Louisville, They had on their persons about $100 in gold, and a number of railroad tickets, so that they could jump on any train and go either way, as suited their purpose. To facilitate this they had also left their baggage at the depot, though they had a room at their balls: three striking him in the back, one in the head and one in the arm. was surely no such intention on the part of the President, and he thought none on the part of members of the Sonate.

Although the agitation of the slavery question was the cause of the rebellion there were other interests in the State of Missouri. They were deeply interested in having the Mississippi river kept free to the slavery question. He had opposed all agitation of the slavery question. He had opposed the bill for the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia, not because he considered it unconstitutional, but because it was not expedient to bring the subject up for discussion. The South has been annually frightened by some story of the abolition master yet if Congress should abolish the petty amount of slavery in the District, he did not suppose his State would secede; but he hoped that the Senators were determined to do this thing; he would be quick or the great State of Delaware will be getting a peep behind the curtain, and, discovering an awful plot o emancipate the few slaves already nearly free, and she might go South for her constitutional rights.

The Senators from Keptucky were getting dexited, and those from Maryland were growing suspicious of some dreadful thing to happen. He had been opposed to the bill for the cultivation of the cotton lands, though he supposed the measure was a harriless one. Yet he feared that it might have a bad effect on the border States, and hence voted against it, yot if the statement was true, that slavery was the corner stone of the government, he would he willing to Schulz the head of the cotton lands, though he supposed the measure was a harriless one.
