"Mr. Wharton, could I be made to be-lieve that even ignorantly I had wronged you to the value of a dollar, I should not feel the perfect consciousness of honor I now feel. There must be a thief somewhere. Some of the clerks may find access to the money! But are you willing to let the matter rest for a few days?

will strain every nerve to detect the evil He finally consented to let me try my hand at detecting the thief. He promised not to lisp a syllable upon the subject to any one else, and also to leave the matter wholly in my hands for a week. He gave me a warm grasp when we separated, and said that he hoped I would succeed. On the following morning I entered the store with all my energies of mind center-ed upon the work before me. I had left the cash account open to be closed up in the morning. When I next opened the safe, all was as I had left it. The next night I fixed the knob in the same manner, and on the following morning I found forty dollars gone! Upon the pocket-book were linger marks of red lead; and when I came to open my cash book I found the same kind of marks there. So I had learned one thing, the thief knew enough to see whether any account had been made of the money before he took it!

I felt more unpleasantly than before for my unwelcome snamic or warner linger.
