Under the Mosaic law, the Jews celebrated the Passover on the 14th day of the month Abib, or Nisan, that is a day or two before or after the vernal equinox. The carly Christians differed as to the proper time for celebrating the festival and the dispute grew very serious, each party manutaining their respective customs, unmaintaining their respective customs, until the question was finally settled by adopting the rule by which Easter falls on the first Sunday after the full moon which harmens many or post after Mean, which superstitions. The most common is the English custom (of doubtful origin) of making presents of colored pasche or paste eggs, which is very ancient. In a royal roll of the time of Edward I, preserved in the tower an entry appears of 18d for 400 eggs to be used for this purpose. The eggs were often elaborately ornamented, and the children used them in a sort of game which consists in testing the strength of the egg shells. This practice is still retained in parts of England and also in our own country, though our shrewd boys sometimes use painted glass eggs and, by their superior-hardness, come out of the contest with pockets heavily laden with prize eggs.

Verdict against a Railroad Compeny pany.

Jesse Smith has obtained a verdict for S600 against the Cleveland and Pittsburgh Railroad Company, for damages sustained by his daughter, whose foot was cut off by a train on that road, about two years ago, in Manchester. While crossing the track, in front of the train, her foot caught between a rail and a piece of plank, in which position it was held firmly until the wheels passed over it. The company was not to blame, but the jury considered that they should at least pay the expenses incurred in medical treatment, nursing, etc. The girl is now sixteen years of age, and crippled for life.

The term "Consumption" was originally applied to many diseases situated in differ ent organs, and having no symptoms in ent organs, and having no symptoms in common, except the wasting or emaciation of the body. They were called consumptions because the body consumed away. This use of the term led to great confusion among writers, and it was found necessary to designate the kind of consumption meant by prefixing the name of the affected organ. the affected organ.

Laennee, the great discoverer of the Stethescope, in the course of his extensive researches into the pathology of the langs, found that small granular bodies always exist in the lungs in genaine consumption. I am particular that this should changes which only a disease of the lungs, out twoercutary disease. I am particular that this should be understood; for the changes which these tubercles undergo produce the do-struction of the lungs, and all that melancholy train of symptoms which mark the orogress of consumption, while their seal—the air tubes and cells of the lung—indicates tile treatment necessary for the removal.

The tubercles regulate the stage of the disease by the changes which they undergo. We say consumption is in the first stage when the tubercles are small specks. or points of a grayish color-half transparent. In this condition they resemble mil-let seed, and hence are called milliary tubercles. The tabercular matter is secreted from the blood.
