It seems that Curtis went by the name of Frederick Colborne Curtis in England, and was formerly Captain in a military regiment. There are, however, a few facts which might interfere with the identification of General Curtis with the Sunder tion of General Curtis with the Sunder-land fugitive, such as the circumstance of his having been a member of Congress four years ago, his having been born, bred and raised in Ohio, and his never having been in the parish of Sunderland during the whole course of his life. Evidently Cap-tain Frederick Colborne Cartis, and Gen. Samuel R. Curtis are exceedingly differ-ent persons.—St. Louis Republican. FURTHER advices have been received from the Sandwich Islands in relation to the reported negotiation pending with the British government for the establishment of a British Protectorate over the same, It of a British Brotectorate over the same. It appears that the Hiwaian government has, like some others, become financially embarrassed, and seeks succor from England. Some years ago the government of Hawnii proposed annexation to the United States, but nothing come of it. France, at another time, menaced its independence.
