Will be examined in vain for a parallel to this rebellion against a good government, long prepared for by ambitious ment who were made doubly confident of success by the aid and counsel of former administrations, and by the belief that their plans were unobserved by a magnanimous people. They precipitated the war at a moment when the general administration had just been changed, under circumstances of astounding perfidy, without a single reasonable shade of complaint, and in the face of repeated manifestations of moderation and peace on the part of the President and his friends, they took up arms and declared they never would surrender until their rebellion had been recognized, or the institutions established by our fifth of lith of lith of the condition of the loyal States, at last convinced that they never would surrender until their rebellion had been recognized, or the institutions established by our fifth of lith of lith

Magistrate. Every step of this monstrous treason has been marked by violence and crime. No transgression has been too great and no wrong too startling for its leaders. They disregarded the sanctity of the oaths they had taken to support the Constitution; they repudiated all their obligations to the people of the Free own fellow citizens, and crowded their armies with forced levies. They drove from their midst all who would not yield to their despotism, or filled their prisons with men who would not enlist under their flag; they have now crowned the rebellion by the perpetration of deeds scarcely who we even to savage warfare. The investigations of your Committee have established this fact beyond controversy.

the Naval Investigating Committee of '59, of communicating to the advisers of the Government evidence apparently adverse to them, and giving them the opportunity to cross examine the witnesses against them, or to refute or explain their testimony, is, in the opinion of this House worthy of imitation whenever practicable by Investigating Committees appointed by order of the House of Representatives, especially when the said Committees re-ceive and collect such testimony in secret session, and that it is contrary to the plainest principles of justice to condemn any citizen upon ex parte evidence taken against him by a Committee in secret, and the purport of which has not, if practicable, been laid before him by said Committee, with an opportunity to explain or refute it before their report.
