Mr. Horne having gone to New Coroner McClung held an inquest, on Saturday morning, upon George Landzette, who died from over indulgence in liquor. On Friday night he, with three companions, went to a house in Birmingham, where they drank two or three quarts of whiskey, after which Landzette lay down and died in about two hours. He was about nineteen years of age and left his home, in Lower St. Clair township, that evening in good health. The jury found a verdict of death from intemperance and exposure.
