NON-COMBATANT HERO.

of the Confederate steamer Patrick Henry, arrived in this city yesterday afternoon, with the important intelligence that one of the enemy's iron-clad gunboats had silenced our batteries at Day's Point, on James river, and was then coming up the river.

To save time, Captain Tucker had this messenger placed on the steamer Yorkmessenger placed on the ste city in a buggy, and at once performed his duties.

The news soon spread abroad on the streets and created a great deal of excitement. What steps have been or will be taken to prevent the ascent of the James river to any vital point we do not know, and would not tell if we knew. The matter wears a serious aspect, but no one here will falter in any duty that may be assigned him.

Rumors were rife, after the arrival of the Norfolk train, of the bombardment by the enemy of the Cranery Island and Sewall's Point batteries, and our fortifications elsewhere below, but they are doubtless landing forces yesterday at Burwell's Bay, or Smithfield, and that their intention will doubtless be to march across the country—a distance of some eighteen or twenty miles—and take possession of Smfoll. We learn through Captain Hill, of the steamer Schultz, who arrived here last night at 10 o'clock, that our batteries at Day's Neck and Hardy's Bluff, on James river, were attached by three of the enemy's gunboats yesterday morning at eight o'clock, and silenced in a short time.

The steamers Patrick Henry and Thomas at eight o clock, and shenced in a short time.

The steamers Patrick Henry and Thomas Jefferson both arrived here yesterday evening at a late hour, and are now at Drury's Bluff, awaiting further orders. It is believed that the river at that point will be properly obstructed by the sinking of boats and vessels.

One of the vessels which attacked our batteries at short range was the iron-clad One of the vessels which attacked our batteries at short range was the iron-clad steamer Galena. The two others were supposed to be wooden vessels.

We learn from Capt. Hill that he was yesterday ordered by General Magruder (now sick at Westover) to take on at Berkley wharf 175 barrels of flour and a large lot of bacon and beef, and proceed our diers of which division immediately wish-died to cross the bridge all at once. The conveyances clashed with each other. Some of the unfortunate men were crushed, while others, losing all spirit, threw them selves by massacreing all who obstructed their passage. Panic Caused by their Apperaance
The citizens of Petersburg, Virginia, were thrown into a great panic on the 8th inst., by the appearance of the new ironclad gunboat Galena up James river. We make the following extracts from Petersburg and Dichmond papers:

[Remainder on Monday.]

In this Kremlin, the citadel of the capital, the abode of the czars, and which contained their treasure, the sacred images of the Greek religion, and the mortal remains of the sovereigns laid out in funeral chapels, adorned with gold and gems, Napoleon took up his quarters. His soldiers, who had long been strangers to a bed, that night slept on soft couches in mansions of the noble and wealthy. They were dreaming of enriching themselves by [Remainder on Monday.] mansions of the noble and wealthy. They were dreaming of enriching themselves by the spoil of those luxuriant but forsaken abodes, when the torches of the incendiaries—the felons who had been liberated from prison and left behind for this dread number were applied to the help either
