WHO INDUCED HUNTER TO ISSUE HIS EMANCIPATION

The excitement occasioned by the sud den and unexpected appearance of Gen. Hunter's order, giving freedom forever to over one million of slaves, having subsided, the question as to the causes which induced its publication are beginning to elicit considerable inquiry, The General's life has been one of comparative seclusion; he has never attempted the role of the demagogue, but has been a modest, retiring and meritorious soldier. Besides, he has passed the age of reckless impulse, even if he was known to be an enthusiast with him the "hey-dey in the blood is tame," and waits upon the judgment. These being Gen. Hunter's characteristics, the astonishment created by his late order was necessarily great; and the conclusion arrived at is that its origin emanated from a portion of the Washington Cabinet, urged by the leading radical members of Con-It is perfectly evident that, no matter how conservative the masses of the Republican party are, the leaders of that organization in Congress have no idea of prosecuting the war for the restoration of the Union. This is not their purpose now, nor was it at the beginning, when hostilities commenced. Their whole course in Congress has been an agitation of the initiating slavery question.
