But, happily, the wealth and the strength of this confederacy do not reside in its cities. We have ceased to hope for encouragement or aid from the Powers of Europe; and the rebels of to-day, relying only upon themselves, will yet show to the world that their spirit cannot be broken by reverses, and that they are no degeneruse ate sons of their fathers—the rebels of our first Revolution.

heard, it is most decided. We believe government and people are united on the criment and people are united on the criment and people are united on the criment. Though there has been gross derections with reference to the river defences, the public are not willing to incur the diagrace of submitting to two or three federal gunboats. They will resist until a demand can be backed by such force and circumstances as at least to make a surrender and and not to crimenom the check will shame.

Under any view of such a fate as the occupation of this city, o funtarnished fame and generous renown by the fathers.

THE theory that Northern soldiers are ionsters is not yet given up by the Richnond papers. In the same page in which the Dispatch prints an account of the hunane treatment of rebel wounded by our soldiers at Williamsburg, it asserts, that of the soldiers of General Banks' army, the soldiers of General Banks' army,

"Some of the drunken stragglers shot hogs, sheep and other stock on the route, and selecting a fine joint, left the carsass lying on the highway. Poultry was wantonly slaughtered in the farm yards and eater rose. It is asserted, and has been proven by eye witnesses, that even the dogs, outs and rate, encountered in the march of this horde were killed and eaten with voraciousness that betokened starvation. Indeed, they had no commissary, and it is believed that their conduct was attributable to directions from their of fices."

JUDGE THOMAS, of Massachusetts, replied to one of Thaddeus Stevens' scurrilous speeches the other day in good style, concluding with the following: "I may say, Mr. Speaker, and I hope

Our news columns give all the intelliThe fall of Richmond would, indeed, be a heavy blow. It is difficult to estimate the vast quantities of stores and public works which must be destroyed or abandoned in the event of such a dieaster. The capture of the seat of government would sadly size the confidence of Europe in our ability to achieve our independence.

We see it stated that the unofficial advice given in a friendly spirit to gantlemen of high position by Count Mercier, during his late visit, was never to surrender the capital.
