In a popular form of government, where political power is derived by the process of the ballot, opinion must be free, and there must be in the citizen a proper authority for the exercise of opinion on all subjects, especially those of a political power. This is the process by which political power of opinion on all subjects, especially those of a political power of opinion on all subjects, especially those of a political power of opinion on all subjects, and it is, therefore, a great obligation to impeach no man's opinion, if it be exercised conformably to law and by virtue of the law, and to have a proper respect for his convictions and his conclusions.
