Induced by the extensive sale and universal popularity of Hoofland's German Bitters, (purely vegetable) hosts of ignorant quacks and unscrupulous adventurers, have opened upon suffering humanity the flood gates of Nostrums in the shape of poor whisky, vilely compounded with injurious drugs, and christened Tonics, Stomachics and Bitters.

Beware of the innumerable array of alcoholic preparations in plethoric bottles, and big-bellied kegs, under the modest appellation of Bitters; which, instead of curing only aggravates diseases, and leave the disappointed sufferers in despair.

YOU WANT SOMETHING to STRENGTHEN YOU!

YOU WANT A GOOD APPETITE!

DO YOU WANT TO BUILD UP YOUR CONSTITUTION!

DO YOU WANT TO FEEL WELL!

DO YOU WANT TO GET RID OF NER VOUSNESS!

DO WANT ENERGY!

DO YOU WANT TO SLEEP WELL!

DO YOU WANT A BRISK AND VIGOROUS FEELING!

If you do use

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS.

From J. Newton Brown, D. D., Editor of the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge.

Although not disposed to favor or recommend Patent Medicines in general, through distrust of their ingredients and effects; I yet know of no sufficient reason why a man may not testify to the benefit he believes himself to have received from any simple preparation in the hope that he may thus contribute to the benefit of others.

I do this the more readily in regard to Hoofland's German Bitters, prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson, of this city, because I was prejudiced against them for many years, under the impression that they were chiefly an alcoholic mixture. I am indebted to my friend Robert Shoemaker, Esq., for the removal of this prejudice by proper tests, and for encouragement to try them, when suffering from great and long continued debility. The use of three bottles of these Bitters, at the beginning of the present year, was followed by evident relief, and restoration to a degree of bodily and mental vigor which I had not felt for six months before, and had almost despaired of regaining. I therefore thank God and my friend for directing me to the use of them.

J. NEWTON BROWN.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23, 1861.

From the Rev. Joseph H. Kennard, Pastor of the Tenth Baptist Church.

DR. JACKSON—DEAR SIR:—I have been frequently requested to connect my name with compositions of different kinds of medicine, but regarding the practice as out of my appropriate sphere, I have at all cases declined; but with a clear proof in various instances, and particularly in my own family, of the usefulness of Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters, I depart from my usual course, to express my full conviction that for general debility of the system, and especially Liver Complaint it is a safe and valuable preparation. In some cases it may fail, but usually I doubt not it will be very beneficial to those who suffer from the above causes. Yours very respectfully,

J. H. KENNARD,

Eighth below Coats street, Phila., Dec. 24th.

From the Wife of ALDERMAN WUNDER, Germantown.

GERMANTOWN, June 1, 1861.

DR. C. M. JACKSON—Sir:—It gave me pleasure, two years ago, to give you a certificate, testifying that the German Bitters had done for me. I am now perfectly cured of all those diseases your medicine professes to cure, viz: Dyspepsia, Chronic and Nervous debility, disease of the Kidneys, etc. The powerful influence it exerts upon Nervous prostration is surprising. I have been constantly frequently in reference to your Bitters, and without hesitation, have recommended it for the above complaints, and in every instance it has effectually cured. Your medicine has a great reputation in Germantown, and is sold in every Drug Store, and in most of the Grocery stores here. If any one should question what I say, let them come to Germantown, and I will prove to their satisfaction, that the Bitters have cured in this vicinity more than twenty cases of the above disease.

Respectfully, HANNAH WUNDER,

Main street, above Rittenhouse, Germantown, cen'a.

JUST THE THING FOR THE SOLDIERS.

Will build up the constitution, and give health and strength to an overtasked and diseased faith.

READ THE TESTIMONY FROM THE ARMY

PHILADELPHIA, August 12, 1862.

DR. C. M. JACKSON—Dear Sir: While in Virginia, owing to the change of water, I was taken with a severe diarrhœa, which seemed incurable, and which greatly weakened me. When we reached Martinsburg, I feared I should have to come home: but noticing some of your Bitters in the store Mr. H. H. Price, in that town, I purchased a supply, and on taking it was speedily restored to health. The diarrhœa was quickly checked, and I experienced no return of it. A number of my comrades, who suffered in the same manner and from the same cause, with whom I shared the Bitters, join me in this certificate. I expect to return to the seat of war with the Legion, and shall certainly take a supply of the Bitters in my knapsack. I would not be without it for its weight in gold, particularly on going into a limestone region.

Yours, truly, A. E. ALTEMUS,

Company H, Scott Legion.

THE ANDREWS PATENT PIPE.

(PATENTED JANUARY 21, 1862.)

REQUIRES ONLY A TRIAL TO prove its incomparable superiority to any pipe now in use. It may be smoked without any deleterious or unpleasant effects, as the oil of tobacco is not drawn into the mouth, and the tongue does not become furred or coated from inhaling its poisonous properties. The bowl is made of the finest Devonshire clay, and gives to the tobacco a peculiarly pleasant fragrance. The tobacco cannot become moist, as in ordinary Pipes, because the drip beneath receives the saliva that insensibly escapes into the stem; hence the pipe never becomes offensively rank, and the breath of the smoker does not proclaim to every one he meets that he has been "indulging in a pipe."

When the bowl becomes clogged, or the drip beneath requires cleansing, the pipe may be taken apart by removing the ring. The clay bowl may at any time be restored to its original whiteness by burning in the fire, (first drying it thoroughly) or a new bowl may be procured of the dealer.

☞ Read the opinions of those who have tried this pipe:

"From personal experience, we know it to be all that it is represented."—Philada. Inquirer.

"A very decided improvement."—Public Ledger

"All who have tried it bear testimony to its excellence."—Evening Bulletin.

"Decidedly the best pipe in use."—Merchants' Star.

"The pleasures of a smoke are enhanced a thousand fold by its use, and the deleterious effects of smoking are entirely obviated."—Sunday Dispatch.

"I heartily concur in the testimonials you have as to its superiority over all other pipes in use."—John S. Rohrer, M. D.

"It obviates, to a great extent, the deleterious effects of the poisonous constituents of tobacco—an essential oil and nicotine."—N. C. Friedenbach, M. D.

Numerous other extracts might be given, but the above are deemed sufficient.

DAILY POST.

GENERAL McCLELLAN'S SCOUT.

BY WESLEY BRADSHAW.

There is not, perhaps, one of our numerous readers who has forgotten the anxiety, the doubts and fears, which possessed the public mind immediately after the Bull Run battle. Nor is there one, perhaps, who forgets the thrill of joy which took the place of all other emotions in the people's heart, when in the terrible hour of national suspense, the star of George B. McClellan rose promisingly from the mountains of Western Virginia. The veteran Scott, laying aside all motives but his country's welfare, said to the nation, "here is your future guiding star: follow him and you will be saved."

Amidst the darkness and tempest, the nation's eye has ever since been bent confidingly on the guiding star, and they have been led by it to glory and success.

When the gallant young commander, who, in spite of the machinations of his enemies, is still "first in the hearts of his countrymen," first arrived in Washington, he found a single letter waiting for him. Breaking the seal, he learned that it was from an old friend, a strong advocate of Southern rights, asking an early interview on "business of the highest importance to the Government.

For a while McClellan mused upon the tone of this missive. Treachery was rampant in the capital; it lurked in every department, and scarcely any one could be trusted by those who had been selected to guide public affairs. McClellan's decision was, however, speedily made, and as speedily put in execution, for the same evening the writer of the mysterious letter was closeted with the new commander for nearly an hour and a half.

During the interview the latter elicited from his visitor information of the utmost importance, provided it proved true. But here was the difficulty. The statements made by the gentleman were all given in a candid, straightforward manner, and no cross-questioning could shake it in the least. McClellan fixed his eyes upon the face of his old friend, and scrutinized every lineament thereof, but failed to discover the least expression that might awaken distrust.

At last after remaining a minute or so in profound thought, he turned a quick, penetrating glance upon his visitor, and asked with peculiar emphasis:

"Mr. F*, you say that you have the cause of the Union at heart, that you cherish it more than aught else: would you be willing to run any risk for its sake?"

"I would, General," was the immediate and unhesitating reply.

"Would you be willing to give up your family for the sake of your country?"

The answer to this interrogatory was delayed for full half a minute, during which delay, McClellan's look seemed to pierce to the very depths of the other's soul. A flush came to the cheeks of Mr. F*, and his hand, which he had thrust carelessly beneath the breast of his coat, clutched at something once or twice. The flush left his cheek, however, and the concealed hand became still, as he replied, in a voice almost as firm as before:

"That, General, is the hardest part, but I am willing even to give up my family for my country."

The gallant McClellan's generous feelings and impulses welled up within his breast, and he was about to grasp the hand of his friend, when the position in which he stood toward his country re-entered his mind with full force, and he continued his questions.

"Mr. F. would you be willing to give your life for the Union?"

"I would."

There was even less hesitancy about this answer than the most prompt of the others.

"Would you," continued McClellan, "be willing to go into any portion of the rebellious States and obtain information such as would be useful to the Government in the prosecution of its plans for the war?"

"I would."

"Then come here at this time to-morrow evening, and I will give you instructions in regard to a certain matter which I wish you to investigate. If you successfully accomplish the object aimed at you will render your country a most important benefit."

With a cordial shake of the hand, Gen. McClellan and Mr. F* parted, the former to address himself to the tremendous labors before him, and the latter to prepare for one of the most hazardous enterprises that has been undertaken since the beginning of the war, an enterprise which we would not, even at this time, make public.

During the course of the following day, McClellan sent for a private in the —— Ohio regiment who had served under him in Western Virginia as a scout. In this line the Ohio soldier, who was nicknamed "Weasel Bob," on account of his peculiar abilities, had no equal. Having traveled from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, and from Oregon to Florida, he was thoroughly acquainted with the country, and the various modes and lines of traveling therein.

Weasel Bob adored his commander, and in return the latter placed in the eccentric soldier the fullest confidence. Upon entering the presence of McClellan, Bob glanced about him as though from mere habit, while the General, smiling at him, bade him be seated, and immediately opened the conversation with.

"Robert, I have one of the most difficult and dangerous affairs to place in your hands that you have yet had."

Weazel Bob at this hung his cap on his broad knee, and placing his long bony hands thereon, he leaned forward and looked intently into the face of his General; in order to miss nothing the latter might have to say.

"There will be a man here to-night," continued McClellan, "who has offered his services to make a tour of observation through Virginia. He is a Southern man, both by birth and principles, and yet he professes a strong attachment to the Union."

"Now, it is my intention to send him into Virginia, upon an errand of high importance, which could hardly be accomplished by any other man. He seems to be true, and worthy of being trusted; but, yet, I have a suspicion that he may possibly be in league with the rebels, and only using an apparent loyalty to the Union as a cloak to hide his fealty and friendship for the Confederate Government.

"He will, as I have said, be here this evening at 10 o'clock, to receive from me certain instructions, after which he will immediately start South. You will also be here, and when he takes his departure, you will follow him and never lose sight of him till he returns, when you will report to no one but myself. Do you understand?"

"I think I do, General," answered Weasel Bob, with a peculiar twinkle of his calm, blue eyes, "I think I do; but with your permision, I will ask a question."

"Well, go on."

"If I catch him doing anything wrong am I to shoot him?"

"No! Above all things, should you discover him at any treachery be sure to follow only still more closely than ever, until his return to Washington, and note well those with whom he has intercourse. You are good at remembering faces!"

"All right, General, I understand exactly now, and I'll do my best to fix everything just as you want it."

With these words Weasel Bob rose to his feet and left the room with the usual military salute.

The next night, true to his appointment, Mr. F* was at General M'Clellan's headquarters, and having received the instructions as to his course, before mentioned, set forth on his mission.

Like his own shadow, a tall lank figure followed him, and that living shadow never left him until the following tragic incident took place.

Mr. F* had got as far as Harrisonburg without any difficulty, and as Weasel Bob thought at the time, with much more ease than a good Union man should be able to do. Bob did not recognize the fact that his own presence in the same place proved the fallacy of his reasoning. Mr. F*, as we have intimated, met with his first difficulty in Harrisonburg, where he was recognized by a man who had been in Washington, and who, himself a rabid secessionist and traitor, was fully acquainted with the character and sentiments of Mr. F*. As the latter was walking one evening in one of the principal streets of the town, he was met by his enemy, who stopped him and began to question him as to the cause of his presence in the place.

A crowd instantly began to collect about the two men, and, as the conversation proceeded, a cry was raised.

"A spy! a traitor! hang him! kill him!"

In a moment a rush was made upon Mr. F*, and he was knocked down, and would doubtless instantly have been trampled to death, had not our friend, Weasel Bob, rushed forward, and scattering his assailants right and left, stooped down and raised him to his feet, with the words:

"I don't believe he's a Union man; he's just as good a secesher as I am myself."

"Who are you? who are you?" shouted several of the crowd, who closed up again around Mr. F* and his rescuer.

"Who am I?" quickly answered Weasel Bob, in indignant tones. "I am a South Carolina man: I am."

"That other man's a Union spy," yelled one of the rioters. "Mr. Williams here says he is."

"Well, if he is, let's attend to him; but if he can prove that he isn't, why don't go to murdering an innocent man. That's what I say."

This address, uttered in convincing tones by Bob, restrained the feelings of the mob, and a general assent was given to his opinion. The intended kindness, however, proved of little benefit to the poor victim, for being searched on the spot, a pass given Mr. F* by Gen. McClellan himself was discovered.

This was sufficient evidence, and it was immediately decided by his captors that he should be taken forthwith outside of the town and hung in the woods.

The first impulse of Weasel Bob was to fight for the death of Mr. F*, whom he felt now fully convinced was a staunch Union man: but his orders were positive to return to Washington, and therefore, he was obliged to restrain his noble feelings, and witness the execution of Mr. F*.

When he went back to Washington and made his report, his voice lost somewhat of its firmness, as he narrated to Gen. McClellan the end of the tragedy. Said he:

"Oh, General, it was just the hardest thing I ever saw done, and made me feel kind of bad ever since, but you know I had to obey orders. The blood thirsty hounds took him out to the woods, with a rope round his neck. When they came to the tree on which they were going to hang him they gave him five minutes to pray. And such a prayer he made: it would have moved a heart of stone. He prayed for our country, and the success of our armies, and he prayed for the South, that she might be brought back into the Union; and he prayed beautiful for you, and he prayed for his wife and children. When he came to these last, his voice trembled like a leaf, and do you think, them infernal brutes jerked him up to the tree just as he spoke his wife's name, Mary, I think it was."

"Alas! noble man!" exclaimed the commander, as he heard the end of the fearful story, "he was then true to the Union, and has given his life for our cause. He has died like a hero, and while his wife and little ones live they shall be well cared for."

"Ah, General, exclaimed Weasel Bob, as he rose to leave the room, "that's what makes everybody love you so. If the rebels could only know you as well as we do, they'd never fight against you."

Verily, a soldier's tribute to the best of commanders.

TO HORSE OWNERS.—DR. SWEET'S INFALLIBLE LINIMENT FOR HORSES is unrivalled by any, in all cases of Lameness, arising from Sprains, Bruises or Wrenching, its effect is, magical and certain. Harness or Saddle Galls, Scratches, Mange, &c., it will also speedily cure Spavin and Ringbone may easily be prevented and cured in their incipient stages, but confirmed cases are beyond the possibility of a RADICAL CURE. No case of the kind, however, is so desperate or of such long standing, but it may be alleviated by this Liniment, and in a few days application will always remove the Lameness, and enable the horse to travel with comparative ease.

Every horse owner should have this remedy at hand, for its timely use at the first appearance of Lameness will effectually prevent those formidable diseases mentioned, to which all horses are liable, and which render so many otherwise valuable horses nearly worthless.
