SAMUEL GREY & SON, Merchant Tailors, No. 19 Fifth Street. MEANS & COFFIN.

ALBERT FEARING.

It was a cold day in January, and the 245 LIBERTY STREET. winding Hudson was bridged with glittering ice. The tree-tops that crown the romantic Highlands were covered with masses of snow, which in many cases took fantastic forms, presenting images of knights and warriors of the olden time, and sometimes that of regular encampments, as the eye wandered over their singular outlines. In the distance towered the frowning ramparts of old Fort Putnam, then in good repair, for the period in which we have open ed our tale was that of the American Rev olution, and the dull roar of war was re sounding throughout the snow-clad land. Near the river's brink, at a spot now occupied by Cozzens' Hotel, at West Point a soldier was slowly pacing to and fro-pausing occasionally to listen for a mo ment, and then resuming his walk. It was one of the outposts on which that sentinel was posted, and one on which it was nec essary to exercise the utmost vigilance; hence the cautious manner with which the and his hour of duty being limited to two hours, he had consequently yet an hour to stand, which was long enough in such a lonely position, with thermometer five degrees helow zero. The moon, however, was shining down brightly upon the sheet Wm. P. GARDNER, See'y. jyl7-lyis ed snow, and he was a young and hardy soldier of the future republic, so he did not shrink from the duty before him, but watchful and attentive, and yet as if exup and down upon his post, nor heeded the chill blast as it went rudely sweeping

All at onegan sound was heard at a little distance, as of some one trampling through the deep snow. The sentinel paused in his walk, and gazed toward the spot from which the noise proceeded, and presently a tall figure, wrapped in a large gray overcoat, was seen to emerge from the shadow of a neighboring thicket, and stalk with martial stride out into the silvery moonbeams.

"Who goes there?" shouted the sentinel, his voice awaking the echoes that slumbered in the breast of the forest ic23-tf THOS. MOORE, 18 clothed mountain. "A friend, Fearing- a triend of America | MAMILY COAL DEPOT. and her cause, replied the intruder, as he advanced still nearer. "Stand and give me the countersign, said the sentinel, in a low, tern voice, as he brought his musket to a charge. "I know you, sir, of course, but then needful forms must be gone through

"Yes, sir, I am a patriot. I would serve my country to the last drep of my blood, if necessary."

"I believe you. Fearing. I know you to be a good man and true, and that is what to be a good man and true, and that is what to be a good man and true, and that is what to be a good man and true, and that is what to be a good man and true, and that is what to be a good man and true.

Of course, you will be asked many questions by Sir Henry as to the strength of this post, the number of troops, and other matters, which you must be careful to exaggerate as much as you can with safety. believe that the post is well detended, you may prevent his planning an attack until spring, when we shall have reinforcements, and be better prepared to receive him, should he think fit to pay us a visit. Do you perfectly understand me, Fearing?" "Perfectly, sir." "Well, then, give heed. You will enter the British army, watch with keen eyeseverything that transpires, acquaint yourself with its movements, its numbers, and everything that would be likely to be interesting to me, and, having obtained every information in your power, you can watch ormation in your power, you can watch your opportunity, make your escape, and return hither, when you will obtain your promised reward. It will require great caution, great discretion, great seconds of the second of the se cretness on your part to insure success, but, should you chance to succeed, you will be doing your country a great service, which she will not be likely to forget. At which she will not be likely to forget. At the same time, I will not conceal from you that the mission is fraught with no little danger. Should your plans be discovered, you would be hanged just as sure as your name is Albert Fearing.

"I know that, sir."

"And knowing it, you decide to run the hazard ?" "I do. To morrow morning I will be off, and in two days in the presence of Sir Ienry Clinton."
"Tis well. I will now return to the fort, and remember I shall look with anxi-
