For the sake of prospective traitor, Breckinridge, flew into rebellion, leaving their Northern friends to the fierce fury of treacherous renegades and open foes. These Southern ingrates deserve the persistent and everlasting hate of—every Northern Democrat, and the state of—every Northern Democrat especially of those who sympathised with and voted for their candidate. And, we rejoice to know that the heaviest blows rejoice to know that the heaviest blows which have been dealt upon Southern treason have been from the strong arms of some of these very men. It is a just the country what the country needs, and the country needs, and the back are the country needs, and the blessing of God will recompense those who first broke up a national party and are now seeking to destroy the government, that they should feel the terrible vongeance of those whose confidence and friendship they so guiltily betrayed. But our duty to our government looms away above these considerations. The government is ours; it belongs to us all; no one has exclusive claim to it, and we are all bound to defend, protect and perpagaste it, and the only way to do this is and Tacitus, and avers that he has collecin support those who, for the time being, ted official documents from the State and administer its affairs. ARCHBISHOP HUGHES. The New York papers of Monday contain a sermon from this distinguished prelate, preached by him the Sunday previous. Much importance is attached to this discourse on many accounts. He has just returned from Europe, after eight or ten months' absence, and his position gave him great opportunities of ascertaining the drift of public opinion concerning our civil war. The Hishop declares that he found the influential and governing class generally against the North; not that they had any great sympathy for the rebels, but because they wished to see this government permanently broken up. In his poinion the only course left for our side is to fight it out, and that as soon as possi- in that Banks was driving Jackson before ble. The following is the conclusion of the sermon: I do not know what may happen in case this war should continue as it has been continuing since I left this country. The news renders all attempts at judging fairimpossible, because it is contradictory and confused. It is difficult for one, even acquainted with the country, to comprehend how the land lies. Much more is it with absolute certainty what may happen if this war continue. And in the meantime, what is the prospect of its coming to an end? I do not see any prospect.there does not appear to be an issue; and questions that depend on so many additional circumstances for their solution. But there is one thing and one lution. Baton Rouge, Aug. 7, 1862. Sin :- It is one of the happiest moments f my life that I am enabled to inform the Department of the destruction of the ram Arkansas, not because I held the iron-clad in such terror, but because the community did. On the 4th inst. I sent the Tennessee to Baton Rouge with provisions for Commander Porter, and the gunboats stationed at that place. On the night of the 5th she returned with information that the enemy had made a combined attack on Baton Rouge by the ram and the gun-boats, and the Webb and Music, and callboats, and the webo and Music, and carring for assistance. At daylight, the Hartford was under way for this place, with orders for the others to follow me as fast as they got ready. Gen. McClellan at Williamsburg.

Late News from Memphis. &c. &...

Philadelphia, August 19.-The Bulctin, this evening, says a gentleman from ortress Monroe this afternoon gives us the following:

The Army of the Potomac had all arrived at the lower end of the l'eniusu a without being molested on the way in the slightest degree. McClellan, it was understood, was Williamsburg yesterday morning.

Fitz John Porter's Division, which was on the opposite side of the James River, has also come down the Peninsula. General Burnside arrived at Fortress Monroe from Washington on Sunday, and went up the James River as far as the Chickahominy to see how operations were going on, returned yesterday morning and reported everything going on most satisfactorily. I had sent the Cuyuga up before me, agreeably to a request of Gen. Butler, in favorable for the movement of troops. Weather cool and delightful, and most Most of the gunboats have come dow the river, but some remain to guard the pontoon bridge across the Chickahominy, over which the army passed on their way down the Peninsula.

Mements, August 16.-The Grenada Appeal, of the 13th, states that the Federals took possession of Bayou Sara er Monday the 11th inst., seizing all th sugar and molasses and quartering a gar-rison there. Also that the rebels have been reinforced in Arkansas, and that their ordinance stores there have been increased, and that Gen. Holmes has a sumed command of that State. Appeal contains a long editorial in which it says: The sooner we cease to look for foreign aid or European intervention the better for all concerned.
