

The Union as it was: The Constitution as it is!

FRIDAY MORNING, AUG. 29.

THE EFFECT OF IT. The sudden effect produced amon some of the ablest and most embittered of the radicals, by the late brief reply of the President to Horace Greeley's address, in the name of twenty million of people, is one of the remarkable signs of the times. These people have, for nine months, been creating the impression that those who talked about the restoration of the Union. without the destruction of slavery, were traitors in disguise. All the ; enny whistle Abolitionists of the Gazette stripe took up this key note, and played upon it, upon all occasions, up until the appearance of the President's late communication. When we, in our humble way, ventured to express the opinion that the war should be conducted for the main tanence of the constitution and the restoration of the Union, blatant Abolitionism immediately said, "that means bringing Jeff Davis back to the Senate.' How many scores of times has the Gazette and its white eyed and sickly complected more concern for the Union than he did for abolitionism? Slavery is the cause of the war, these fanatics reiterated, and it must be first put down, let what may follow. When moderate men contended for crushing out of the rebels, letting slavery thing else which stood in the way of our success, the fanatics cried out "sympathy with slavery." In short, the unfortunate man who was not a mere abolitionist looking to the simple question of the destruction of slavery and nothing else, was a man to be watched as being dangerous to the government, and many a one was

The consolidation of the Commercial Journal with the Guzeite was a shrewd stroke of policy, the beauties of which are now fully developed. It has snug little sinecures in this region of the State. a long and desolating war. It will thus seen that, while some people regard this war as a calamity, there are others, equally sagacious, who have no reason to complain-like Sir Giles Overreach, "we name no parties." There is another gentleman in this Guzette association, who has, as yet, not been proyided for ; he is, we are informed, piously inclined, and would, therefore, it is thought, make an efficient quartermaster or sutler. We commend him to General doorhead's consideration.

A CHARACTERISTIC AD-DRESS.

Forney's Press of Wednesday comes to this precious piece of insolence and falsehood, and find it merely a reproduction of false ones, in which Forney has been indulging for the past six months. This you will hear of the greatest success or of address is simply a repetition of Occasional's falsehoods. It hasn't the merit of being well gotten up, for Forney is palpably visible in every line; indeed he doesn't attempt to disguise himself, for the whole thing appears in tattered and filthy garments, which the beggar, Occasional, has cast aside. The address is simply a charge of disloyalty against every citizen of Pennsylvania who will not follow in the wake of such saturated corruptions as Forney himself.

We regret exceedingly to see that Cyrus P. Markle, Esq., has permitted his name to be used as chairman of the committee which produces this contemptible production. It does well enough, perhaps, for a political brigand, a Robert Macairein political profligacy, and a skulking poltroon and its write-eyed and sickly complected at all times, like this wretch Forney, to ought, on Sunday, to have been where they then, indeed, it would be advisable to accuse political opponents of disloyalty to their government, but Mr. Markle should not allow such political highwaymen to not allow such political highwaymen to prostitute his respectable name to any such wicked and culpable purpose. He knows that the sentiments of this vile address are not his, and he should, in instice to the prosecution of the war simply for the are not his, and he should, in justice to himself, to his friends and to the scountake its chances of annihilation with every drels who used his name to give respectability to this infamous production, disavow

The New York press is particularly spiteful about the recent or ler, forbidding army correspondents within the lines. The redoubtable Corceran remarked to the instrument may be in view of more recent events. The redoubtable Corceran remarked shorting to the solution of the war until the public learned to depend upon a canded daily statement from Washington. The New York Herald says:

The New York Times says: "We have no disposition to complain made the chief end of it—and from a small class of discontented Democratic subject, any more than on many others, of the action of the Government on this small class of discontented Damocratic politicians on the other, who invest slavery with a kind of inviolable sacredness, he announces that he means to treat it as an interest wholly subordinate to that of the preservation of the Union."

The Evening Post here falls in along side of the President, and gives "the amall philanthropic class," to which it subject, any more than on many others. We should have been glad to have had them act upon some intelligent system in regard to the press. and to know from one day to another what was expected at its hands;—but such an expectation would have been perhaps unreasonable.
