DAILY POST.

Newspaper Correspondents.

The order of Gen. Halleck excluding newspaper reporters and correspondents from the army lines is of such stringent character, it is understood, that he must needs be a bold man who would disregard it. The order itself has not been published, but these gentry who had the significant advantage of hearing it read, speak of it as treating all reporters and correspondents who may be found within the lines as spies—and as everybody knows that death is the fate of a convicted spy, it is not wonderful that the newspaper men turned their faces from the front to the rear. But, as if in view of the cool daring of the newspaper men the penalty of death was sufficient to deter them from "plying their vocation," they were likely to be starved out, or suffered lamentable inconvenience beforehand, by all officers and soldiers having been forbidden to afford them any facilities in connection with that vocation. Any officer giving them information of things past, present or to come, it was ordered, should be dismissed from the service, and any soldier thus found guilty, should be punished. Yet some of the more pertinaciously enterprising of the newspaper men, those who, like many others, regard an end as perfectly justifiable, so that that end be accomplished, found it easy enough to attempt to assume other characters and appear in other capacities in connection with the army. As particular friends of this or that officer, no longer to be known as newspaper men, of course they might in conversation learn something from the aforesaid officers, just as any other friend might—but that too in view of the terrible risks under the aforesaid orders, seems also now to have been given over, in great part as impolitic.

George N. Saunders.

A Canada paper of a recent date gives us the following in relation to this notorious person:

"How many are better known at the North than Mr. Saunders, and yet, by the suppress of disguises, he escaped recognition. Some years ago he was much concerned in Lake Superior mining, and he passed from the federal States as a miner, with a slow Cornish brogue, carrying his tools in his hand. At Niagara, however, he was stopped, no one being allowed to cross the river without a pass. In conversation with the sentry, he expressed in the broadest dialect his utter unbelief in the possibility of any man, much less a carriage, traversing in safety such a frail structure. The sentry, equally ingenious in adjourning the contrary doctrine, finally proposed a practical trial, and with much feigned trepidation Mr. Saunders consented to walk a little way across. Having once started, he did not come back a success, to return, but made for the Clifton House, where he had to make himself known before the proprietor of that aristocratic hotel could be induced to receive a guest of his appearance.

"We are authorized to state that Mr. Saunders is the bearer of the draft of a commercial treaty, which the confederate envoys will propose to the chief European powers, irrespective of recognition or intervention. Recognition without intervention is conceded to President Davis a material object to a solid commercial and international position of salary. He considers that no solid and durable peace can be concluded except by the concurrence of the United States; and that little encouragement can be won for any appeal to its material interests, and the resulting poverty by the Northern people upon their government. In this view the Confederate envoys will propose to the European powers a treaty of commerce, to take effect on the recognition of the independence of the Confederate States by the United States, or the opening of the ports by other means, guaranteeing absolute free trade, with participation in the coasting trade and internal navigation to the powers accepting it, on certain conditions; and the same advantage will be proffered to the United States, leaving the latter to choose between a prolongation of the war, with its doubtful issue, and the immediate restoration of the benefits of reciprocal trade.—Canada paper.

Curious Statistics of Insanity.

The last report of Dr. Kirkbride, Superintendent of the Pennsylvania Asylum for the Insane, contains a series of tables, from which some remarkable facts may be gathered. It appears from the carefully prepared statistics of that institution that out of 1,992 male patients received from its opening in 1841 to the present time, the larger proportion have come from the ranks of the farmers, merchants and laborers. The exact figures are as follows: Farmers, 287, merchants 192, laborers 162. A similar proportion is observable among the female patients: for out of a total of 1,761 women in the Asylum, 255 were wives and daughters of farmers, 200 wives and daughters of merchants, and 121 wives and daughters of laborers.

This large percentage shows that professional men are less subject to insanity than those who have more physical exercise and less tension of the brain than they. Of lawyers, there were in the Pennsylvania Asylum but 31 out of 1,992 patients; of clergymen but 25, of artists 17, and of physicians 39. Among the students, however, 66 out of 1,992 were insane.

Eighteen painters were admitted to the Asylum within twenty years, together with one hair-dresser, one potter, one author, one waiter, six hatters, eight confectioners, twenty-nine planters, and forty-six seamen. The whole number of males and females admitted was 3,753, and the greatest number of cases were caused first by ill health of various kinds, next by intemperance, third by mental anxiety, fourth by grief, and fifth by loss of prosperity. From these five causes 1,444 out of 3,753 persons became insane. Dr. Kirkbride says:

"Periods of great political excitement, the thousand sources of mental anxiety and the casualties incident to a state of war, sudden pecuniary reverses and undreamed-of changes in the condition of families, hardly ever fail to increase the amount of mental disease in a community, while, unfortunately, the same causes render too many less able than ever to meet the expenses and losses invariably incident to such a form of illness."

At one of the drug stores on Broad Street, they have a large mortar and pestle for a sign. A lady walked into the establishment the other day, and wanted to know how they sold buttermilk. "Buttermilk!" said the proprietor: "we don't keep it, madam." "You don't?" said she: "then why don't you take down your churn?"

"I wish you would not smoke cigars," said a plump little black-eyed girl to her lover. "Why may I not smoke as well as your chimney?" "Because chimney's don't smoke when they are in good order." He has quit smoking.

The International Chess Congress.

The International Chess Congress in London has terminated, leaving the English journals in doubt whether Herr Anderssen is a match for Paulsen, or Paulsen too skillful for Anderssen or anybody else. The London Times says:

"The first prize of £100 has been won by Herr Anderssen, who, out of thirteen games, the number which each competitor had to play, won eleven games, besides one by default, and lost one. The second prize (£50) was gained by Mr. Paulsen, who won ten games, besides one by default, and lost two. The third prize (£30) was awarded to the Rev. J. Owen, who won ten games including three by default and lost three. The fourth prize (20) was obtained by the Rev. Mr. Macdonald, who won nine games, including two by default, and lost four.

"Mr. Paulsen has so far realized the anticipations of all his friends and admirers, that opinions are divided as to whether Herr Anderssen is more than his match. Immediately the decision as regards the prizes became known, the London Chess Club arranged several interesting matches, giving handsome presents to the winners One of these was between Anderssen and Paulsen, and after a severe struggle, which lasted nearly a fortnight, during which they played eight games, the result was that they each won three games, and that two were drawn. Herr Anderssen was then obliged by his engagements to return home, and as the condition of the match—namely, that it should be won by him who obtained the first five games—was not complied with, the club divided the money equally between them.

"At a general meeting of the chess-players, under the Presidency of Lord Lyttelton, held recently, for the purpose of receiving a report from the committee specially appointed to consider a new code of laws to regulate the game of chess, several important changes were proposed and adopted. This code, which will be binding upon all chess players in this kingdom will be published shortly, together with the games played at the International Congress, in one volume, by Messrs. H. G. Bohn & Co. It will be edited by Herr Lowenthal and Mr. Smedley."

THE ANDREWS PATENT PIPE.

(PATENTED JANUARY 21, 1862.)

REQUIRES ONLY A TRIAL TO prove its incomparable superiority to any pipe now in use. It may be smoked without tobacco or supplement given, as the oil of tobacco is not drawn into the mouth, and the resinous does not become burned or cooked from inhaling its poisonous properties. The bowl is made of the finest Peruvian clay, and gives to the tobacco a peculiarly pleasant fragrance. The tobacco cannot escape from the mouthpiece. Moreover, because the drip be made receptacle, the saliva, that unavoidably escapes into the pipe, never becomes offensively rank, and the breath of the smoker does not proclaim to every one he meets that he has been "indulging in a pipe."

When the bowl becomes clogged, or the dripbasin requires cleansing, the pipe may be taken apart by removing the rim. The clay bowl may at any time be restored to its original whiteness by burning in the fire. (Just drying it thoroughly) or a new bowl may be procured of the dealer.

☞ Read the opinions of those who have tried the pipe:

"From personal experience, we know it to be all that it is represented."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

"A very decided improvement."—Public Ledger

"All who have tried it bear testimony to its excellence."—Baltimore Methodist.

"Decidedly the best pipe in use."—Monaysunk Sun.

"The pleasures of a smoke are enhanced a thousand fold by the inspection of the deleterious effects of smoking are entirely obviated."—Sunday Dispatch.

"I honestly assure in the tobacco you have to use the sensitively very delicate paper in use."—John S. Bolmer, M. D.

"I have observed, to a great extent, the deleterious effects of the poisonous constituents of tobacco—as are entirely obviated by it."—S. Breckenridge, M. D.

Numerous other extracts might be given, but the above are deemed sufficient.
