Exemption of Postmasters. Ms. Eurros.—Do you know, or could old school you inform your numerous readers how present. many postmasters are necessary to take charge of a country post office, where the revenue of the department (in a majority of cases) is not over $50 per annum, and rarely exceeds $100 in the rural districts?

Since the talk of a draft commenced, there have been numerous accessions to the clerical department of said offices, exempting in sente cases, two, three or feur able bodied men. In each of these districts gone forth from its walls to fight their cases, two these districts of the second, the number who had already gone forth from its walls to fight their cases. good men, exempt by disease, age, &c., or women, could be found to supply the places of these 'patriots if they desire to go, and doubtless in many cases the emolutions. We can only say, in answer to our cor-and soon reached Liberty street, where respondent, that one man should fill the cars were in waiting and thousands of duties of a country post office without as. anxious spectators. The partiags of many sistance, and the employment of addisistance, and the employment of additional clerks could, in many instances, be shown to be a palpable evasion of the law. We know of some patriots in this law. We know of some patriots in this city who could fill a dozen such offices without overworking themselves. We could not vouch for the manner in which the duties would be performed, but we know at least one who hos found no diffi several fat places.

Monday, Sept. 1, 1862. The incidents of this letter were take down in my note book on the bloody bat-tle field of Manassas Plain, while sur rounded by the white, cold bodies of 1,800 slain heroes of the Republic, and 5,000 living soldiers of the rebellion.

At 10 o'clock on Monday Gen. Pope sent a fing of truce with a corps of ambu lances to carry off our wounded in the Saturday's fight.

The corps arrived at the outer line of enemy's videttes, stationed along the bank of Cub Run, about 11 o'clock, and the white flag at once gave us admittance within their lines. A curious group of slouch hatted, butternut uniformed cavalry thronged around us, and though detailed to essort us to the battefield, stood around listlessly staring at us as if we were a sort of national horse show. They were very Instressly starting at us as it we were a sort of national horse show. They were very respectful, and cleverly communicative. Chatting along the road, they took us to the battle field.
