SELECT TALE.

THE BEGGAR'S LEAP.

A REPORTER'S STORY.

BY ANNA M. LAWSON.

My brother Richard was a reporter, and for years he was attached to the newspaper press in one of our largest cities.

Dick saw many strange and thrilling sights, accounts of some of which we gleaned from the papers he sent us, while the particulars of others he communicated through the medium of his letters.

From one of the epistles which we received I copy the narrative, verbatim. He says:

"I had a somewhat thrilling adventure the other night, good folks—quite thrilling, if I am any judge of such matters. I will tell you the particulars, and the account would not prove uninteresting to any body, much less will it do so to you.

"I was going home from the office about midnight, (a morning paper, you know, is apt to keep one up at all hours,) when as I was passing up Sixth street—which is one of our largest avenues—and had just gotten abreast of a twelve-foot alley, a dark place filled with rickety abodes of poverty and habitations that bear a most villainous reputation, I was startled by a sudden cry of 'Murder.'

"With terrible distinctness the word pealed out on the stilly air.

"'Murder! murder! murder!'

"The ominous sound was uttered by a woman, too; and thrilled me in every nerve of the body.

"For a few moments I stood and listened, with my gaze fixed upon the alley. The word was not repeated, however, nor was there any particular stir among the outlawed denizens, and the larger streets were nearly or quite deserted. The cry of murder was, no doubt, of too frequent occurrence in that vicinity to attract much attention from the occupants of the alley, and no one else appeared near to hear it.

"My curiosity was aroused, however, and, it being all in the way of my business to poke myself around into strange places, I rapidly pushed on up into the dark alley. I saw nothing, though, to throw any light on the recent outcry.

"At length I stopped, and, as it happened, in front of a dingy, old fashioned, three story brick house—a building that, in its better days, a long time ago, had, no doubt, been looked upon as something particularly fine.

"Suddenly I heard a window quickly raised; a sheet of light instantly flooded the alley at my feet, and I looked up.

"'Murder!' I again heard, in a woman's voice, now uttered in tones broken and half smothered.

"The next moment the window was violently slammed down and the light disappeared.

"Again all was dark and still.

"'I must find out what that means,' I muttered to myself.

"Instantaneously I turned to the door of the house and rapped in a quick and anxious manner.

"There was no answer.

"I rapped again, loud and long.

"Still no answer.

"Impatiently I began to pound upon the door.

"At last I heard the clatter of feet in the bare hall, and, a few moments afterward, a dirty, slovenly look ng Irish woman cast open the door and confronted me. The creature was drunk, too; so drunk that she staggered.

"As the door opened I heard a mingling of male and female voices and the sound of a bacchanalian revelry.

"'Who lives in the third story of this house?' I demanded.

"'I did not, of course, suppose that the house was occupied by but one family; on the contrary, I judged that every room was rented separately.

"'Who lives in the third story, is it?' repeated the woman, with a drunken hiccough between every syllable.

"'Yes, yes. Who lives in the third story?' I replied, with a growing impatience.

"'An' how should I know, I'd like yer to tell me?' was the indignant answer. 'I'm not the landlord, sure, nor the landlord's lady, aither.'

"'Then you don't know who lives up stairs?' I added.

"'Divil a bit,'' was the forcible rejoinder.

"'Well, some one cried murder up there, a few moments ago!' I concinued

"'Did they, indade?' responded she, without the least show of anxiety or curiosity.

"'Yes they did,' I quickly replied—did you not hear it?'

"'Divil a bit, sur.'

"I saw that I should make no headway with this poor creature, and took another course.

"'I will go up stairs and see what is the matter my good woman, if you have no objections,' I exclaimed, at the same time pushing past the female who, however, willingly made way for me.

"'Be me sowl, it's none o' me bis'ness at all at all,' she muttered as she shut the door.

I scrambled up the dark, rickety stairs, and at last mounted to the third story.

As I reached the upper hall, I heard the sound of voices, issuing from the front room. I moved over towards the door, following the sound, for I could see nothing; but had not taken a half dozen steps, when that ominous cry again smote fearfully on my ears.

"'Murder! murder!'

I stopped a moment, thrilled to the very heart, and then dashed on again; for I am no coward, as you know, and only too ready to poke myself into danger and difficulties.

I tried the door; it was locked.

"'Open the door there!' I said, with a peremptory kick.

I heard a scrambling inside, and the buzz of smothered voices, curses, cries, groans, and, as I thought, the peculiar sound of blows.

Outside I could hear nothing except the cries of the drunken revelers, which rose up from the rooms below.

No one at all seemed to hear or heed what was going on there in the third story.

I knocked again, once more demanding admittance.

"'Open the door there!' I cried.

I thought not of danger myself. Previous immunity from harm had made me reckless and venturesome.

The sound of the struggle grew louder and more violent. It was fierce and sanguinary, if there was any judging by what I heard.

"'Help! oh help!' now came to my ears in smothered tones.

Fairly beside myself with excitement, I placed my shoulder against the door, and pushed with all my might. In a few minutes it burst open, and flew back against the wall.

I almost fell my full length into the apartment. Managing to recover my equilibrium, however, I glanced around.

THE GREAT OWNERS' OIL SWEETS. INFALLIBLE LINIMENT FOR HORSES is unrivalled by any, in all cases of Lameness arising from Spavin, Ringbone, Sweeny, Wrenches, its effect is magical and certain. Harness or Saddle Galls, Scratches, Mange, &c., it will also speedily cure Spavin and Ringbone may easily be prevented and cured in their incipient stages, but confirmed cases are beyond the possibility of a RADICAL CURE. No case of the kind, however, is so desperate or hopeless but it may be alleviated by this Liniment, and its faithful application will always remove the Lameness, and enable the horse to travel with comparative ease.

Every horse owner should have this remedy at hand, for its timely use at the first appearance of Lameness will effectually prevent those formidable diseases mentioned, to which all horses are liable, and which render so many otherwise valuable horses unsafe for use.

TO THE PUBLIC.

DR. SPECIALLY to the ignorant and afflicted by Modest of all denominations, treat secret and delicate disorders, self-abuse and diseases or irregularities common and incident to youths of both sexes, and adults, single or married. Because Dr. BRANDRETH publishes the fact of his doing so, the ignorant and falsely modest are dreadfully shocked, and think it a great sin very immoral and for contamination and corruption among their wives, promising sons and daughters. Their family physician would be cautious to keep them in ignorance that they do the same as Dr. BRANDRETH, (except publishing) lest a lucrative practice might be lost to them among stupid falsely modest and presumptuous families, born and raised in ignorance, sprung up as mushrooms of society compare society, intelligence, sense, &c., to dollars and cents, mysteriously, meanly grilly gotten. It is to publicity, however, that numerous parents and guardians are thankful that their sons, daughters and wards, previously feeble sickly and of delicate condition and appearance have been restored to health and vigor by DR. BRANDRETH'S PILLS, besides many before and after marriage through whom have been saved much suffering, anxiety, mortification, &c. Spermatorrhea or nocturnal emissions, are completely cured in a very short space of time by his new remedies, which are peculiarly his own. They are compounds from the Vegetable Kingdom, having seen the darkness of the Mercurial treatment, he has abandoned it and substituted the vegetable. Female diseases are treated with marked success—having had over sixty years (40) experience in their treatment in hospitals of both the Old World and in the United States; leads him to say—to all with a fair trial, health and happiness will again bloom upon the now pallied cheek. Trifle no longer with quacks and quackery, but come and be cured. Consumption and all of its kindred diseases, of which so many annually fill our countries, can now be relieved, providing they attend to it in time. Full particulars can be had of my treatment by procuring a copy of the Medical Adviser, which is given gratis to all that apply. Having the advantage of over forty years experience and observation, consequently, he has superior skill in the treatment of special diseases, and who is daily consulted by the profession, as well as recommended by respectable citizens, publishers, proprietors of hotels, &c.
