but their own unregulated impulses.—
Sectional hate, party spirit, political passions inflamed to diabolical fury—these are the, "higher law" of these wretched realots, in comparison with which the sacred obligations of the fundamental law of the land, and the public law of nations, are as light, in their estimation, as the feathers of a gossanter's wine. In obedifeathers of a gossanier's wing. In obedi-ence to this higher law of unreasoning passion they undertook, many years ago, to annul one distasteful but minor prosion of the Constitution; now they give loose reins to their tanateism, and drive with a coach-and-six through the very body of the instrument. The Constitution confers on the this policy makes changes of the most violent and sweeping character, changes which even the Republican party in its national conventions disclaimed any interest of a factorial conventions. tention of of making and admitted to be unconstitutional. The Constitution prounconstitutional. The Constitution pro-tects the property of all citi-zens from forfeiture by civil penalty, with-out trial and conviction: this policy in-flicts heavy penalties without even the pretense of a trial, inflicts them on the citizens of the whole States, without even itizens of the whole States without even the pretense of any discrimination between the innocent and the guilty, blend-

That law on the principles of that act. That have does not act on the gross population areas of country. The forefeitures it denounces are confined to persons in rebellion against the government. What can be HIGHLY IMPORTANT!! more preposterous, or a more monstrous perversion of justice than to make the guilt or innoceace of an individual depend on whether the State in which he happen-

d to be born shall have representatives Congress on the first day of January would be sufficiently monstrous to make man's right on his property depend on nis own exercise of the elective franchise. Never was there so degrading a satire on Republican institutions as the compulsory voting required by President Lincoln. But when a man,s property is made to depend not on whether he chooses to vote nimself but on whether his fellow citizens choose to vote and whether the number voting under this executive compulsion happens to be a majority, we are lost ir astonishment that a chief magistrate of a ree country should undertake to make citizens perform what ought to be their reest act under coercion, and to convert he ballot box into a criminal tribunal.— Vbat has the numbeer of votes cast in a particular election to do with the question SEAMLESS BAGS, whether a particular citizen is guilty of treason? It is certain that the Union will never be restored till this ill advised action of the government is eversed. It converts every inhabitant of the South into a zealo', whose all is embarked in the success of the rebellio The idea that they will succumb to threats that they will vote on compulsion, that they will feel terror, or misgivings, or anything but increased indignation at such a proclamation, shows small knowledge either of human na ure or of the temper of the South rimind. Such a proclamation cannot possibly be enforced, and its only effect will be to strengthen the determination of the rebels to fight to the verlast. They are shut up in a lane which has no turning. When the military power of the rebels is broken we have laid be fore ourselves a task still harder to perform. At the very crisis of the contest of arms the President has reinforced them as arms the President has remoreed them as effectually as if he had doubled their squadrons in the field.
