THURSDAY MORNING, OCT. 2. BE ASSESSED.

Our Democratic friends must remember that they must be assessed TEN DAYS bevote. Saturday next will be the last day for making these assessments.

THE DUTY OF THE CRISIS. When secession organized and armed itself, war, civil war, became inevitable.—

And when this secassion prevailed all civicording to our notion of figures this il federal authority became in fact suspended, and its revisal thereafter became dependent on the defeat of the hostile organization. Authority had lost its moral

It is therefore above and beyond all selfish or partizan excitement or arbitrariLincoln would thereupon feel warrantal.

All our civil authority is suspended, in need no further assurance of circumum fact and in right, within the bounds of the their friends of the Valiandigham prove secession, until the military power, di-rected by military law, has suppressed the ate also, and thus shield them from all hostile rebellion. Until then all our civil rious harm. And, if they should the legislation against the South is not in fact have a Convention to revise the Federal legislation at all, but only threats of what constitution, we have no death that would be easy of attainment, though we we intend to do; and, conceding to the South the earnestness and courage which they have proved, we ought to know that such threats only increase the force of the influence that opposes us.

Faith in civil authority gives its force far beyond its real presence; but it is not so with military power. It can legitimate— What one Drop of Ink M ght Have ly act only where it is, and all its acts are out no decrees that will bind its adversaries or affect their institutions. Only its presence in force can have any effect. We have recognize that acts of force, not authority. It can send have recognized this in shutting the Southern ports by actual blockade, not by either legislation or military decrees. All now admit that there will would, if it had the power in the spring of All now admit that these military decrees were contrary to the laws of civilized war-fare. We went to war ourselves with tenden Compromise propositions.—Ex-England on account of them in 1812.

Instead of venting the crude plans and discordant schenges excited by our passions, let us study and practice the laws of civilized warfare and we shall grow calm, confident and united, under the guidance of a settled and impersonal authority. Real study has always a calming influence and leads us away from ourselves and our personal disappointments. We shall cease to rely sides appears to have been traible. Date on executive, legislative and party plans the Confederates have been shiffelly mafor the abolition of States, and ports of entry, and slavery, and for the confiscation of estate. All edicts and decrees on these subjects are mere aggravating threats on waste paper According to military and international law we might as well have abolished the monarchy of England or its jurisdiction over Ireland by a mili washington itself. Whether the army can be pronounced safe eyes there reveals to the control of the pronounced safe eyes there reveals to the control of the contro tary decree during the war of 1812, because thereby our adversary would be weakened, as do may of the above acts during the continuance of the rebellion. When the avowed secession is suppressed, we shall deal with all these matters by the civil authority, according to its legitimate functions.

Conclusion, that if a million of men could be brought into the Federal service, they would not suffice to defend Washington a secessionist Leartainly will. Come, it is and keep military possession of the Border States alone.
