TUESDAY MORNING, OCT. 21.

Thrilling.

At the presentation of a pistol to a brave Connecticut corporal, the orator apostrophised as follows:

"Corporal! my heart is full. These times try the souls of us all, as well as our pockets. My words must be few and to the purpose. Take this weapon and go in. Give them Jessie—and John Charles also. Say you will. Resolve that it is a big thing, and that you can see it. Shoot at it. Smite them hip and thigh, and pay no regard to camphene or brickbats. But beware of Old Bourbon. Do your duty, John! Keep out of drafts. Don't go off at half-cocked! and keep your pistol pointed from you."

The corporal, on receiving the weapon, was too much affected to make a formal reply, but promised that the pistol should speak for him.

As MRS. PARTINGTON came in after her long absence, it seemed as if sunshine had entered with her, though there was anxiety upon her brow and a bundle in her hand. It was for the "salutary committee," she said. "According to the last century," said she, "how many are to be grafted in Boston?" looking at us with great earnestness as she spoke. It was the one question that we couldn't answer, not having the census at hand. Finding herself foiled in this, she continued: "Well, can you tell me if a man is exempted from being grafted who has bellicose veins?"—We assured her that we thought not; that the more we had with the bellicose veins the better: whereat she was silent. We complimented her on what she was doing for the soldiers. "Yes," said she, "everybody should do something for the cause, however circumcised their means." She took a pinch of snuff as she spoke, and looked down meekly at the bundle tied up in the old Constitution and Guerrierri cotton handkerchief. Ike was outside, taking care of a boy who was threatening to tear down the recruiting handbills on our corner.

Garribaldi not going to America.

The London correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer says:

According to the late papers the American Consul at Vienna has been making himself ridiculous by writing to Garibaldi a semi-official letter, asking him to enter the Federal army in case of his discharge from his present bonds. At least this is the view taken of the correspondence by the press generally. Garribaldi is said to have replied to the effect that he would do so as soon as he could. I have no doubt such would be his personal desire, but I am convinced that he will be overruled by his English friends, who, I have reason to know, because I have conversed with them on the subject, will resort to every expedient short of actual force to prevent his so doing.
