And will positively prevent Yellow Fever, Bilious Fever, &c.

THEY CONTAIN

NO ALCOHOL OR BAD WHISKY!

They will cure the above diseases in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred.

Induced by the extensive sale and universal popularity of Hoofland's German Bitters, (purely vegetable,) hosts of ignorant quacks and unscrupulous adventurers, have opened upon suffering humanity the flood gates of Nostrums in the shape of poor whisky, vilely compounded with injurious drugs, and christened Tonics, Stomachics and Bitters.

Beware of the innumerable array of alcoholic preparations in plethoric bottles, and big-bellied kegs, under the modest appellation of Bitters; which, instead of curing only aggravate diseases, and leave the disappointed sufferers in despair.

YOU WANT SOMETHING to STRENGTHEN YOU!

YOU WANT A GOOD APPETITE!

DO YOU WANT TO BUILD UP YOUR CONSTITUTION!

DO YOU WANT TO FEEL WELL!

DO YOU WANT TO GET RID OF NER VOUS DISEASES!

DO WANT ENJOY!

Do you want to sleep well?

Do you want a brisk and vigorous feeling?

If so use

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS.

From J. Newton Brown, D. D., Editor of the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge.

Although not disposed to favor or recommend Patent Medicines in general, through distrust of their ingredients and effects; I yet know of no sufficient reason why a man may not testify to the benefit he believes himself to have received from any simple preparation in the hope that he may thus contribute to the benefit of others.

I do this therefore readily in regard to Hoofland's German Bitters, prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson, of this city, because I was prejudiced against them for many years, under the impression that they were chiefly an alcoholic mixture, I am indebted to my friend Robert Shoemaker, Esq., for the removal of this prejudice by proper facts, and for encouragement to try them, when suffering from great and long continued debility. He used three bottles of these Bitters, at the beginning of the present year, was followed by evident relief; and restoration to a degree of bodily and mental vigor which I had not felt for 12 months before, and had almost despaired of regaining. I therefore thank God and my friend for directing me to the use of them.

J. NEWTON BROWN.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23, 1861.

From the Rev. Joseph H. Kennard, Pastor of the Tenth Baptist Church.

DR. JACKSON—DEAR SIR:—I have beenfr uently requested to connect my name with com mendations of different kinds of medicine, but egarding the practice as out of my appropriate sphere, I have in all cases declined; but with a clear proof in various instances, and particularly in my own family, of the usefulness of Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters, I depart from my usual course, to express my full conviction that for general debility of the system, and especially Liver Complaint it is a safe and valuable preparation. In some cases it may fail, but usually I doubt not it will be very beneficial to those who suffer from the above causes.

Yours very respectfully,

J. H. KENNARD.

Eighth below Coats street, Phila., Dec. 24th.

From the Wife of ALDERMAN WUNDER, Germantown.

GERMANTOWN, June 1, 1861.

DR. C. M. JACKSON—Sir:—It gave me pleasure, two years ago, to give you a certificate, testifying as to the German Bitters had done for me. I am now perfectly cured of all those diseases your medicine professed to cure, viz: Dyspepsia, Chronic and Nervous debility, disease of the Kidneys, &c. The powerful influence it exerts upon Nervous prostration is surprising. I have been consulted frequently in reference to your Bitters, and without hesitation, have recommended it for the above complaints, and in every instance it has effectually cured. Your medicine has a great reputation in Germantown, and is sold in every Drug Store, and in most of the Grocery stores here. If any one should question what I say, let them come to Germantown, and I will prove to their satisfaction, that the Bitters have cured in this vicinity more than twenty cases of the above diseases.

Respectfully, HANNAH WUNDER,

Main street, above Rittenhouse, Germantown, cent'a.

JEST THE THING FOR THE SOLDIERS.

Will build up the constitution, and give health and strength to an overtasked and diseased saith.

THE TESTIMONY FROM THE ARMY

PHILADELPHIA, August 12, 1862.

DR. C. M. JACKSON—Dear Sir: While in Virginia, owing to the change of water, I was taken with a severe diarrhœa, which seemed incurable, and which greatly weakened me. When we reached Martinsburg, I feared I should have to come home; but noticing some of your Bitters in the store Mr. H. H. Price, in that town, I purchased a supply, and on taking it was speedily restored to health. The diarrhœa was quickly checked, and I experienced no return of it. A number of my comrades, who suffered in the same manner and from the same cause, with whom I shared the Bitters, join me in this certificate. I expect to return to the seat of war with the Legion, and shall certainly take a supply of the Bitters in my knapsack. I would not be without it for its weight in gold, particularly on going into a mestuous region.

Yours, truly,

A. E. ALTEMUS,

Company H, Scott Legion.

ESPECIALLY the ignorant and falsely Modest of all denominations, treat secret and delicate disorders, self-abuse and diseases or irritations common and incident to youths of both sexes, and adults, single or married. Because so, the ignorant and falsely modest are dreadfully shocked, and think it a great sin very immoral and for contamination and corruption among their wives, promising sons and daughters. Their family physician should be cautious to keep them in ignorance that they do the same as Dr. BRANDRETH, (except publishing) lest a lucrative practice might be lost to them among stupid falsely modest and presumptuous families, born and raised in ignorance, sprung up as mushrooms and who compare society, intelligence, sense, &c., to rotten. It is to publicity, however, that numerous parents and guardians are thankful that their sons, daughters and wards, previously feeble sickly and of delicate condition and appearance have been restored to health and vigor by DR. BRANDRETH'S pills, beside many before and after marriage through him have been saved much suffering, anxiety, mortification, &c. THAT HIDEOUS MAN.

BY EMILY J. MACKINTOSH.

CHAPTER I.

"You know it is your father's wish Lucy."

"Only a wish, auntie, not a command; and I think it is cruel for you to try to force me marry that hideous man."

"He has been very ill, dear, and of course—he—that is——"

"You can't make an Adonis of him auntie; so don't try. And if you could, he would not be much improved in my estimation. Such an uncouth mortal never crossed my path! If I speak to him, he colors to the tips of a boiled lobster, and fidgets his hands and feet as if he was afraid I would run away with them; and his 'yes, ma'am' and 'no, ma'am' are as constrained as if I were his grandmother."

"And yet your uncle says he is very accomplished."

"Oh, auntie."

"Quite true, my dear. You must take into consideration his advantages. His mother, one of the loveliest woman whom I ever knew, died when Lionel was but five years old, and his father, inconsolable, shut himself up in that out-of-the-way country place of his, and never went into society again. Lionel's education has been his whole care; and, a profound scholar himself, he has probably spared no pains to make his son his equal. Still the entirely recluse life was calculated to make the boy shy and nervous, and the long, severe illness which followed his father's death accounts for his pallid face."

"I hope his trip to France will restore his health," said Lucy, rather coldly.

"And you?"

"I cannot go with him," cried the young girl, passionately. "My father's will only requests us to look upon each other as the children of such life-long friends as he and Mr. Carleton should do. He hopes we may love one another well enough to marry happily; otherwise he does not even desire our union. I do not love him, and I cannot flatter myself with the idea that he even admires me, so we had best part as good friends, but no more."

At this instant the subject of the conversation entered the room. A few common place remarks between him and Mrs. Raymond, and then she pleaded some house hold engagement and left the room. The lovers, per contract, sat in silence for some moments and a greater contrast can scarcely be imagined than the two of them presented.

Lucy Hazleton was a blonde of the most exquisite type. Of medium size, her form was graceful and symmetrical, and her fair curls and large blue eyes suited the Grecian profile and fair, delicately tinted complexion. An expression of animation and high intellect saved her face from insipidity; and as she now bent over her sewing, the rich color mantling her cheeks proved her embarrassment. She was fascinated, and not at her ease with the person whom she intended to discard.

And Lionel Carleton, raising his dark eyes from the floor, saw, in the large mirror this perfect form and face; and his height was exaggerated by the attenuation of long illness. The large features, which would have been manly and handsome in health, were actually monstrous in the thin, sallow face; and his dark eyes looked hollow and unnatural, with the black rims which suffering had penciled round them. They were weak, too, and the pink tinge of the lids, and a certain straining look, did not improve their beauty. A close fitting, black skull-cap, which concealed the loss of hair sacrificed in his illness, added to the grostesque and gaunt appearance of the young man. He smiled sadly as he studied the group in the mirror; and then, with the nervous tremor of his voice and fluttering of his fingers which betokened his bashfulness, he said, in a low tone:

"Miss Hazleton, I have come to you at your uncle's request, to tell you that I leave to-morrow; to ask you if I may take with me the hope that the engagement which your father made with mine will be fulfilled when I return?"

He tried to speak calmly; yet, had Lucy studied his face, she could plainly have read in every line, the longing hope, the deep love which made his voice tremble and blanched his sallow cheek.

"I regret," said she quietly, yet not raising her eyes, "that we were so strangely bound to each other before we were old enough to know what the contract imposed. You feel yourself obliged——"

"You mistake," said he eagerly; "there was no obligation on either side. I——"

She raised her eyes to his face, questioningly, and, while he colored deeply, he stammered and let his voice die away in silence.

Something in the look he gave her, in the attitude he took, told the woman's heart his love. This lonely boy in his orphanhood, suddenly brought, for the first time, into familar intercourse with a beautiful girl, loved her with the passionate ardor of first love intensified by his previous life. Touched with a feeling of pity, Lucy arose and come to his side.

"We are both very young, Mr. Carleton, and it is better that we should be free, for some years at least. I will speak frankly. I do not love you!" The ghastly whiteness of his face almost frightened her, but she was acting a noble, true part, and she continued. "I will not trifle with you; and when you have met others with more power to win your love than I possess, you will thank me for it. Let us part good friends, and, believe me, you will carry my most earnest wishes for your speedy recovery and happiness."

"Stay one moment," he gasped "you love no one else?"

"No one. I have just left school; I scarcely know what love means," she said, blushing.

"Then," he said, earnestly, "will you let the engagement stand as it is for one year? I shall then return, and, trust me, if you still feel as you do now, no word of mine shall again urge you to alter your decision. We are, as you say, young, and two weeks is but a short time to make a decision which affects a whole life time.—Let me write to you as a friend only, if you desire it, and perhaps in a year——"

He raised his eyes again with a pleading, almost childlike look, which moved her deeply. His love conquered his shy manner, and the hope of his whole heart was mirrored in his large, dark eyes.

"Be it so," she said gently. "I will answer your letters, and in a year we shall meet again. Only," she said, earnestly; "if my heart remains untouched you must acquit me of any charge of coquetry."

He raised her hands to his lips.

"Believe me," he said, "no thought that is not born of love and respect can cross my mind regarding you," and rising, he left her alone.

CHAPTER II.

"And pray, uncle William who is this irresistible Adonis! I quite long to meet him."

"Your desire shall be granted, then, for I have invited him to pass some weeks at Milton, and he has accepted my invitation. He will be here to-day or to-morrow. Take care of your heart, or poor Lionel will soon have cause to be jealous."

"Mr. Carleton has no right to be jealous," said Lucy Hazleton, quickly; "nor is my heart as susceptible as you imagine. By the way, it is now eighteen months since Lionel went abroad, and it is several months since he has written. Can he be coming home?"

"Not all unlikely. He writes well, Lucy."

"Well! He writes the most charming letters I ever read. No published account of a European trip that I have ever read compares to his letters in interest, wit or grace. His familiarity with the modern languages gives him an insight into the manners of each country, while his ready pen, his keen observation, and alternations of gravity wit, and make his letters perfect models of composition, interesting narrative and graceful address."

She blushed a little and then said:

"If he was not such a fright!"
