Although not disposed to favor or recommend Patent Medicines in general, through distrust of their Intredients and effects; I yet know of no sufficient reason why a man may not testify to the benefit to believes himself to have received from any simple preparation in the hope that he may thus contribute to the benefit of others.

I doubt stee more readily in regard to Hoofland's German Bitters; prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson, of this city, because I was prejudiced scained them for many years, under the impression time if they were chiefly an alcoholic mixture, I am indebted to my friend Robert Shoemaker, are also the recurring ment to try them, when the strict three bottles of these Bitters, at the occaming my first memory of the present year, was followed by ovidend: Felici, and restoration to a degree of coully and mental visor which I had not left for ix months before, and had almost depaired of realings; It, become thank God and my friend for shacing no 30 the tase of them.

PHILADELPHIA, August 12, 1862.

Du. C. M. JACKSON—Dear Skr. While in Vird, owing to the change of water. I was taken who a severe diarrines, which seemed incurable, and which greatly weakened me. When we eached Martinsburg, I feared I should have to ome home; but noticing some of your Bitters in the store Mr. H. II. Price, in that town, I purticed a supply, and on taking it was speedily restored to health. The diarrines was quickly checked, and I experienced no return of it. A zumber of my comrades, who suffered in the same gunner and from the same cause, with whom I shared the Bitters, join me in this certificate. I expect to return to the sent of war with the Legon, and shall certainly take a supply of the Bitrs in my knapseok. I would not be without it it weight in gold, particularly on going into a meetone region.

mamber as banditti without inaugurating a more bloody retaliation and massaccre than the world has ever seen! I only the officers denied it. some affirming that Morgan, as a citizen in times of peace. maintained the reputation, of a generous, genial, jolly, horse-loving, and horse-raching Kentuckian. He went into the rebel-senal, jolly, horse-loving, and horse-racing Kentuckian. He went into the rebellion con more and pursues it with high enjoyment. He is about thirty-five years strength and agility, and is perfectly master of himself; has a light complexion, sandy hair, and generally wears a mustache and a little beard on his chin. His eyes are keen, bluish gray in color, and, when at rest, have a sleepy look, but he sees every one and every thing around him, although apparently unobservant. He is an admirable horseman, and a good shot. As a leader of a battalion of cavalry, he has no superior in the rebel ranks. His command of his men is supreme. While they admire his generosity and manliness, sharing with them all the hardships of the held, they foar his more than Napoleonic severity for any departure from enjoined diuy. His men narrate of him this, that apon one occasion, when engaging in a lattle, he directed one of his troopers to perform a hazardous mission in the face of the portion.

Someon was signtly wounded. The army knew not of his death till they reached Corinth.

General Bindman blown up.

Just before the retreat occured one of the most remarkable incidents of the battle; few more wouderful are on record. General Hindman, than, whom no more fear less, dashing or brave man is found in the rebel service, was leading his men in a favorable position, when a shell for the rebel service, was leading his horse in the breast and passing into his body, exploded. The horse was blown to fragments, and the rider, with his sadiffe lifted some ten feet in the air. His staff did not doubt that their General was killed, and some one cried out, "General Hindman is blown to fragments, and the rider, with his sadiffe lifted some ten feet in the air. Morgan asked, in short, quick words:
"Do you understand my orders?"
"Yes, captain, but I cannot obey."
"Then, good bye." said Morgan, and in a mement the cavalryman fell dead from his saddle. Turning to his men, he sadded, "such be the fate of every man disabeving orders, especially in the face of an enemy.
