Induced by the extensive sale and universal popularity of Hoofland's German Bitters, (purely vegetable) hosts of ignorant quacks and unscrupulous adventurers, have opened upon suffering humanity the flood gates of Nostrums in the shape of poor whisky, vilely compounded with injurious drugs, and christened Tonics, Stomachics and Bitters.

Beware of the innumerable array of alcoholic preparations in plethoric bottles, and big-bellied kegs, under the modest appellation of Bitters; which, instead of curing only aggravates diseases, and leaves the disappointed sufferers in despair.

YOU WANT SOMETHING to STRENGTHEN YOU!

YOU WANT A GOOD APPETITE!

DO YOU WANT TO BUILD UP YOUR CONSTITUTION!

DO YOU WANT TO FEEL WELL!

DO YOU WANT TO GET RID OF HER YOUS JNESS!

DO WANT ENERGY!

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS.

From J. Newton Brown, D. D., Editor of the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge.

Although not disposed to favor or recommend Patent Medicines in general, through distrust of their ingredients and effects; I yet know of no sufficient reason why a man may not testify to the benefit he believes himself to have received from any simple preparation in the hope that he may thus contribute to the benefit of others.

I do this the more readily in regard to Hoofland's German Bitters, prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson, of this city, because I was prejudiced against them for many years, under the impression that they were chiefly an alcoholic mixture. I am indebted to my friend Robert Shoemaker, Esq. for the removal of this prejudice by proper evidence, and for encouragement to try them, when suffering from great and long continued debility. The use of three bottles of these Bitters, at the beginning of the present year, was followed by evident relief, and restoration to a degree of bodily and mental vigor which I had not felt for six months before, and had almost despaired of regaining. I therefore thank God and my friend for directing me to the use of them.

J. NEWTON BROWN.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23, 1861.

From the Rev. Joseph H. Kennard, Pastor of the Tenth Baptist Church.

DR. JACKSON—DEAR SIR:—I have been frequently requested to connect my name with commendations of different kinds of medicine, but regarding the practice as out of my appropriate sphere, I have in all cases declined; but with a clear proof in various instances, and particularly in my own family, of the usefulness of Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters, I depart from my usual course, to express my full conviction that for general debility of the system, and especially liver Complaint it is a safe and valuable preparation. In some cases it may fail, but usually I doubt not it will be very beneficial to those who suffer from the above causes. Yours very respectfully,

J. R. KENNARD.

Eighth below Coats street, Phila., Dec. 24th.

From the Wife of ALDERMAN WUNDER, Germantown.

GERMANTOWN, June 1, 1861.

DR. C. M. JACKSON—Sir:—It gave me pleasure, two years ago, to give you a certificate, testifying that the German Bitters had done for me. I am now perfectly cured of all those diseases your medicine professes to cure, viz: Dyspepsia, Chronic and Nervous debility, disease of the Kidneys, &c. The powerful influence it exerts upon Nervous prostration is surprising. I have been consulted frequently in reference to your Bitters, and without hesitation, have recommended it for the above complaints, and in every instance it has effectually cured. Your medicine has a great reputation in Germantown, and is sold in every Drug Store and in most of the Grocery stores here. If any one should question what I say, let them come to Germantown, and I will prove to their satisfaction, that the Bitters have cured in this vicinity more than twenty cases of the above diseases.

Respectfully, HANNAH WUNDER,
Main street, above Rittenhouse, Germantown, con'a.

JUST THE THING FOR THE SOLDIERS.

Will build up the constitution, and give health and strength to an overtasked and diseased exhibition.

THE TESTIMONY FROM THE ARMY

PHILADELPHIA, August 12, 1862.

DR. C. M. JACKSON—Dear Sir: While in Virginia, owing to the change of water, I was taken with a severe diarrhœa, which seemed incurable, and which greatly weakened me. When we reached Martinsburg, I feared I should have to come home; but noticing some of your Bitters in the store Mr. H. H. Price, in that town, I purchased a supply, and on taking it was speedily restored to health. The diarrhœa was quickly checked, and I experienced no return of it. A number of my comrades, who suffered in the same manner and from the same cause, with whom I shared the Bitters, join me in this certificate. I expect to return to the seat of war with the Legion, and shall certainly take a supply of the Bitters in my knapsack. I would not be without it for its weight in gold, particularly on going into a mestone region.

Yours, truly, A. R. ALTEMUS,
Company H, Scott Legion.

KILLING A JAGUAR.

BY EMERSON BENNETT.

[Concluded from Yesterday.]

"As hunters and dogs were all eager for the sport to begin, the sagacious brutes were led to the spot where the jaguar had held his midnight feast, and were then let loose. Of course the scent was strong, and with many a wild, joyful bark, yelp and howl they went, pell mell, and the hunters after them, leaving me alone with Ichura, my faithful guide. I hastened to mount my mule, in order to follow them, as best I could; but my guide assured me there would be no need of my departure for some time, as the dogs, getting bothered by the different scents, would play round in a circle before leading off, and even then it was more than likely they would not have to go far to find the gorged beast of which they were in quest.

"Ichura was right. For half an hour I heard the yelping of the dogs; first in one direction and then another, but none of them appearing to be at any great distance, though gradually widening the area of their explorations. At length there came those peculiar cries, which assure the experienced hunter that his canine assistants have struck a sure scent, and clapping his hands with delight my guide exclaimed:

"There they go, master, there they go! and now it may be we shall get early news of the mule-killing rascal. Come on now, master! follow me as fast as you possibly can."

"Can the dogs do anything toward mastering such a ferocious beast?" I inquired, as I spurred my mule on after the quick-footed guide.

"No, master, they can only track him up to his hole or tree, and then it remains for the hunters to put an end to him."

"For a time the dogs gained on us so much, that I feared they would get away from us entirely; but after pushing on for an hour, making the best speed I could through the thick wood, I heard them louder than ever to our right.

"I think they have him at last," said Ichura.

"Another quarter of an hour, during which we all seemed to be getting nearer to them, and then, suddenly, on rising a small hill, we saw them frisking about a ledge, some half way down an opposite side, with the Indians quietly standing back, apparently awaiting our arrival.

"On our joining them, Cotannin informed my guide, who also acted as interpreter between myself and the Indians, that the jaguar had entered a hole among the rocks, and that now the Senhor would have an opportunity of witnessing a display of Indian bravery in assailing the ferocious beast in his den.

"And how will he attack him there?" I inquired.

"He intends to enter and spear him to death," replied Ichura, proudly.

"I had heard something of this before, but when I saw it about to be put into practice, and considered the strength, agility and cruel fierceness of the animal I could not avoid a shudder at the awful fate that seemed impending over the adventurer. Even while the guide was speaking, Cotantin himself began to prepare for the terrible contest. Putting aside his crown of feathers, his bow and quiver, wrapping one of the sheep-skins about his left arm, and firmly grasping his spear in his right hand, he walked boldly up to the mouth of the dark pit or hole, spoke a few words to his companions, who formed themselves in defensive attitudes around the entrance, and then, dropping down on his hands and knees, gradually disappeared.

"For some two or three minutes there was a dead and ominous silence, every one seemed to listen with suspended breath, and then we heard the low, sullen growls of the beast, gradually growing fiercer and louder, till at length they burst into a loud, angry roar. This was instantly followed by several human yells or shrieks, commingled with the short, sharp, snarling growls of a savage beast in actual combat; and by a thrashing, scuffling sound as if of two bodies fiercely contending. This lasted for perhaps a minute, during which my very hair seemed to stand on end, and then came gurgling, gasping groan, a human yell, and all grew still as death, which I believed was there in its most bloody and most repulsive aspect.

"One of Cotantin's companions now quickly disappeared in the dark opening and presently returned, carefully drawing after him the bloody form of the hunter, whom at first I believed to be one mass of mangled flesh. But such was not the case. Though frightfully lacerated in two or three places, the gallant fellow was neither dead nor mortally wounded, and in the course of fifteen minutes was able to sit up and converse with his friends.

"It had been a hard fight between him and the beast, but he had conquered, and the jaguar was dead. When the latter was dragged out, all grim and bloody, and stretched upon the earth before me, I inspected him closely—body, limbs and teeth—and secretly thanked God I had not been his assailant the night before. I made Cotantin and his companions some handsome presents, and then, preceded by my guide, rode to Cozva, and rejoined my servants that same evening.

Soldiers Cared For.

Out of one thousand soldiers, one hundred and four are sick; this is the constant proportion, as reported by the Sanitary Committee. The autumn always increases the number by reason of the hot days and cool nights, causing diarrhœas and dysenteries of every shade and degree. One yard and a half of stout woollen flannel, fourteen inches broad, worn from August to November, tightly and constantly round the abdomen, in such a way that it will double in front, with bits of tape strongly sewed on one end, and about one yard from the other, according to the size of the person, for convenience of tying, would do more toward preventing bowel complaints among our brave and self-denying soldiers than all know human means besides.

This simple device arrested the onset of cholera in three days, in one of the largest divisions of the Prussian army, when the terrible scourge last visited Europe. Let every family who has a member in the army forward such an article on the instant of reading this. If you do no better, send an old worn petticoat, for, by reason of its softness and pliability, it is better than anything else.

Let every mother who reads this, and who may have no son or relative bravely battling for the perpetuity of our glorious Union, send one abdominal bandage, to be given to some worthy soldier who has no mother, no sister, no wife, to exercise those kindly cares for him.

A WHITE ROBIN was shot in Auburn, on Monday, by John M. Alorich, of Worcester, who discovered this rara avis in a flock of the pretty redbreasts.

TO OUR ADVERTISING PATRONS.

The undersigned publishers of the city daily press have been compelled, by the depreciation of the currency, the operation of the new tax bill, and the greatly increased cost of everything used in the printing art, to take council together, so as to protect themselves from loss, at the smallest expense to their patrons. No class of producers in the community will feel the effects of the revenue taxes so severely and so directly as publishers.—Congress seems to have specially marked them out for the imposition of an unusual number of taxes. Had their share been limited to the three per cent. impost on their gross revenue arising from advertisements, they could have cheerfully paid it, and felt they were doing their full share toward equalizing the pecuniary burdens of the war; but, in addition to this, and to those which publishers meet as individuals, they have to pay, also, a tax on paper, on ink, on telegraphic despatches, &c., &c.

But even this is not all. Owing to the prevalent practice of each manufacturer, or producer of taxable articles, making himself simply the agent for collecting the Government tax from the consumer, the impost laid upon every article employed in making up a journal is thrown upon the publisher, and thus he has now to pay a largely increased price for his ink, his type, his coal, and, more especially, his paper, which is the main item of his expense. Now, on account of the scarcity of cotton rags paper, has gone up, and is still going up far beyond what the tax alone would have caused, while labor, owing to the enhanced price of everything necessary, has advanced in nearly the same rapid proportion. We thus find that the augmented cost of publishing a paper just now is nearly forty per cent. more than what it was a few weeks since.

In the face of this alarming exhibit, we find a diminished revenue, the chief source of which revenue to a journalist is advertising. The price of subscription in this country is unreasonably fixed so near the cost of the white paper, ink and printing, as to leave the slenderest margin for profit.—The larger circulations thus secured by the cheapness of the paper is depended upon to increase the price and the number of advertisements which are the life-blood of a newspaper. But, unfortunately, advertising is the most sensitive branch of human enterprise. It expands during days of thrift and prosperity, and contracts to the smallest compass during periods of doubt and business or monetary revolutions. Since the war commenced, advertising has fallen off with us, as with journalists generally throughout the country, from thirty to fifty per cent., and we now find ourselves with a flourishing circulation, it is true, but without the revenue which is invariably based on such wide dissemination.

What are we to do? The public demand for news, in these excited times, must be supplied.—It is manifest that when a paper is sold even the minutest fraction below its cost, the larger its circulation the greater the loss it entails. If advertising were brisk, and at good rates, that loss might be covered, but the direct contrary is now the case. We wish to refrain as long as possible from laying a tax upon knowledge by adding to the price of our papers, but we think that, both on account of what has above been urged, and on account of our increased circulations, advertisers ought to consent to a slight advance on the rates of advertising, always exceedingly low in our city.

The undersigned have therefore, after due reflection, agreed upon, and will be obliged to live closely up to the following revised schedule of prices to take effect as to all new contracts for advertising, from and after this 10th day of November, 1862. It is hoped this very slight advance of rates will not only be considered necessary and reasonable by our patrons, but will be sufficient to secure us from loss, without having resort to the more objectionable devices of raising the subscription prices of our respective papers, or by greatly reducing the quantity of their reading matter.

NEW ADVERTISING RATES.
