GEN. SCOTT'S LETTER TO MR. SEWARD.

An English View.

Gen. Scott is America's Wellington the farmer earns his seventeen cents a ity, and he seems to have been endowed day and grows rich. Merchants, physi- with a certain degree of military foresight. cians and lawyers receive their thousands When the revolution which is now in perannum, and die poor. While the far- progress was but looming in the distance, mer scarcely receiving as many tens, dies he alone saw the magnitude and certainty of the storm. His first cry was to garrison How are all these strange results pro- in force the arsenals and forts which comduced? All calculations of dollars and cents fail to account for it. Those who are determined to bring everything to the standard of dollars and cents pronounce argriculture to be wholly without profit, and fit only as a pursuit for those who have not sense enough to pursue anything have not sense enough to pursue anything new President and his new Prime Minister

Herein lays the secret of a tarmer's success—a raising of everything, as far as he possible, on the farm, and buying as little as he possibly can.

Nor is the mistake the only one made by farmers. They all want too much land, and too much stock for their fand. Remote, fifty acres, actually worth one hundred dollars per acre, is worth more acre because ohe half the work expended on the first, will raise as much as the whole amount expended on one hundred on one hundred is better to fatten five head of steers well, will self one only half done, because they will self or more and you will also save than ten only half done, because they will self or more and you will also save the interest of one half the investment.

Thus we see that as soon as the farmer gets his farm paid for and hegins to make the suffer of the content of the old world.
