SECTIONAL AGITATION. The dangerous sectional agitation which has plunged this country in civil war has been going on much longer than the gen erality of readers are aware of. Our government, indeed, was scarcely established before New England began to exhibit the spirit of intolerance which has actuated her ever since; and, in nothing dressed to the ambassadors of France at has she exhibited greater hypocrisy than in her conduct upon the slavery question. As long as she held slaves herself, she was not oppressed with the enormity of the system, but siter the institution grew unchattels," and, after pocketing the proceeds, commenced to discover the sinfulness of slavery. Since then New England has fanned the flames of sectional agitation until her teachings have involved tion until her teachings have involved the country in a civil war, the magnitude war, which, from the very first, assumed the country in a civil war, the magaitude of which is almost incomprehencible.—
By the following extract from the National Intelligencer of the 16th of August, the reader will perceive that, at that early day, Massachusetts was hurling her condemnation against all who would not join in her Abolition agitation. Then, as now, it will be seen that all who fanatics, in its issue of the date mentioned, uses the following language:

"We will inform the editor of the Bos ton Sentinel that we are neither the cham-pions nor the apologists of slavery; and that we lament its existence with as much sincerity as any of those humane gentle-men who daily fulminate their anathemas against it and the only effect of whose writings, if they have any, on the foul blot which they rail at; is to excite insurrection
