MONDAY MORNING, DEC. 15. CITY AND NEIGHBORHOOD INTELLIGENCE

Brig. Gen. C. F. Jackson. In the late attack on the rebel works at redericksburg, Pittsburgh has, according to the telegraphic accounts, lost another gallant son, in the person of Brigadier General Conrad Fager Jackson, of Gen. Reyhold's Pennsylvania Reserve Corps, in Gen. Meade's Division.

Gen. Meade's Division.

Gen. Jackson, who was, at the time of his death, nearly forty five years of age, was a native of Berks county, in this State. In his youth he removed to Schuylkill county, where he acquired some political influence and was once a candidate for the State. Legislature, and we believe a one been arrested and as he belongs to the county, where he acquired some political influence and was once a candidate for the State Legislature, and, we believe, a successful one. He kept a hotel in the town of Pottsville for some years. When the Mexican war broke out he raised a company in that vicinity, at the head of which he served through the campaign, in one of the Pennsylvania regiments, exhibiting all the qualities requisite for a thorough soldier. After the war he returned to Pottsville, where he resided until 1854 or 1855, when he came to this city and obtained a position as conductor on the Johnstown Accommodation train on the Pennsylvania Railroad. He was soon promoted and became a conductor on one of the through trains, in which capacity he served acceptably until shortly before the Pennsylvania Reserves were being formed. He raised a company known as the City Guards, Co. B, which, after remaining in camp for some time, was attached at the committee can be test at Weyman & Son's, Smithfield street, or at George Almoted and became a conductor on one of the through trains, in which capacity he served acceptably, until shortly before the breaking out of the rebellion. After a brief visit to this city, Gen. Jackson was assigned to the command of a brigade, which included his own old regiment, the Ninth Reserves, and two others. He served with this command through Pope's disastrous campaign in Virginia and proved himself tully competent to fill his advanced station. We have not learned the particulars of his death, but are confident that he was doing his whole duty as a soldier, with his command, when he met his fate.

Gen. Jackson was, as we have said.

Gen. Jackson was, as we have said.

Gen. Jackson was, as we have said, a thorough soldier, cool, brave and experienced and possessed the fullest confidence of his superior officers, as well as those who served under him. In him we have sustained a heavy loss and duty when he got on the cars without a ticket. If the conductor declined to change his bill, and the passenger refused or failed to make the change required, the conductor had a right to put him off the cars; and if the passenger refused to go at his command, the conductor had a right to use such force as was necessary to execute his orders. Applying this interpretation of the law to the case in hand, while perhaps both parties were to blame for disputing about the bill, it was the lawful duration of the law of the lawful duration. puting about the pill, it was the lawful dur-ty of Turley to make the change demand-ed by the conductor, in defualt of which it was the lawful right of the latter to put the passenger off the cars, and to use such force as might be required to accomplish that purpose. The conductor, therefore, had not done wrong, in the eyes of the law, in putting Turley off his train.

Decision upon Seal Engraving. The following decision has been made by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in relation to seals, stamps and dies.—
Where a die-sinker or engraver cuts names or designs upon seals, stamps or dies brought him by others, he manufactures nothing, but only performs labor; and where he finds the seal, stamp or die as well, but cuts it for a specific purpose, so that it would be of no special value to any one but the owner—he is not, therefore, a manufacturer under the law. But when he makes and sells, or removes for sale, general seals, stamps or dies which have a general seals, stamps or dies which have a separate commercial name and value of their own, then he must take out a license

On Saturday morning Oliver Fowler, the young man who received a ball in his breast during an affray between William McCleary and James Sims, on Sixth street, one night last week, died at the residence of his father. Mr. John Fowler, Virgin alley, above Smithfield stree—Coroner McClung held an inquest and examined tall who witnessed the affray and James Sims, who was a party to it. The testimony developed was to the effect that McCleary and Sims had quarreled about a breastpin the longing to a girl about whom there was the same quotations we gave in our last report. The sad disaster which occurred on Sunday last has had the tendency to check operations at this point into the absence of material sales, we continued by the same quotations of last leek, viz. Large bodies of troops are now to be seen where but few were found yesterday.

Our dead which were killed yesterday while charging in front of the enemy s works still remain where they fell. When attempting their removal last night the rebels would open with infantry.

The wounded have all been removed from the field, and all the dead obtained are now being buried.
