Pope, was put in McClellan's place, and the first thing he did was to issue a fussy and bombastic address to the army, in which he took especial pains to ridicule McClellan's cautions mode of warfare. After promising to annihilate the rebel army in a single campaign against them, he concluded his bluster in the following terms:

was forced to retreat, and that very cir-

I hear constantly of taking strong positions and holding them, or lines of retreat, and a basis of supplies. Let us discard such ideas. such ideas. The strongest position a sol-dier should desire to occupy is one from which he can most easily advance, against the enemy. Let us study the probable lines of retreat of our opponents, and leave our own to care for themselves. Let us look before and not behind. Success and glory are in the advance, disaster and shame lurk in the rear. Let us act on this understanding, and it is safe to predict that your banners shall be inscribed with many a glorious deed, and that your names will be dear to your countrymen forever."

In order to enable him to thoroughly crush the rebels, the government gave him an army, the like of which the world never saw. McClellan's, McDowell's, Sigel's, saw.
