Sometimes the second of the control of t charge of Franklin Reno, and before the employment of Stewart, and after Stewart left and before Skaggs was employed, were made by Kerr, a regularly licensed pilot, and William Reno, who had no license, operating the wheel which guides the vessel. Here is a plain infraction of the Act of Congress, for there was not a "complement" of licensed pilots, to navigate a vessel whose trips; were between ports so distant from each other.

Although the act imposes a penalty upon those who employ or are employed as unlicensed pilot, yet the very first section of this act of 1852 provides that if any such vessel, shall be navigated, with passengers on board, without complying with the terms of this act, the observation of the season of the same of the season of the retiring the honor of having taken what was method as Douglass' Kentucky artillery.
